

Pure Water Or Fines —Ottawa

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The federal government is promising, in the words of Otto Lang, minister responsible for energy and water resources, "to break through the bureaucratic and jurisdictional maze" and control pollution.

Grits' 'Help' Amuses

OTTAWA — There is some quiet chuckling to be heard on Parliament Hill over the way the federal Liberals have been "taking a helpful hand," as some of them call it, in the British Columbia election.

First it was Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford, taking a swing in a Victoria speech, at the provincial government for "failing" to supply, quality, distribution and protect the taxpayer from abuses by business and industry.

'INACTION'

He singled out provincial "inaction" on drug prices, a field where he considers his government has come on strong.

Then just Monday it was minister without portfolio Otto Lang talking about what the federal government intends having the provinces do about water pollution.

Nobody at Lang's press conference asked specifically about British Columbia.

They didn't have to — for Lang spoke of Lake Okanagan and the Fraser River as "sad stories" in pollution.

They were part of "our heritage," he said, "and we cannot seem to spill them fast enough."

REVENGE?

How come two federal ministers are taking this kind of a hand in west coast politics — giving aid and comfort to the New Democrats?

Well, in Ottawa's eyes, a strong provincial government is a difficult provincial government to handle, and British Columbia's Social Credit administration was neither weak nor easily manipulated by the federal Liberals.

So there could be an element of revenge in it.

Tire Preserver Proposed For Longer Human Life

WASHINGTON (AP)—A British biologist who believes man's normal lifespan may reach 100 years urged Monday that a major scientific nation conduct intensive research into the possibilities for controlling the aging process.

Dr. Alex Comfort of University College, London, said if a nation such as the United States applied adequate resources to such a program it could determine in 10 years whether it is practical to retard aging to a significant degree.

The researcher, a physician as well as a biologist, addressed the opening session of the Eighth International Congress of Gerontology, with scientists from more than 40 countries attending.

Among potentially-favorable avenues of exploration, he said, would be human trials of classes of anti-oxidant chemicals now used by the rubber industry to help prevent deterioration of automobile tires exposed to sunlight, and by the food-processing industry as additives to help prevent spoilage.

Such chemicals are also known as scavengers of so-called free-radicals—the latter being molecular-breakdown fragments associated with all chemical reactions, including biochemical ones.

Comfort said trials of such materials in mice by Dr. Denham Harman of the University of Nebraska produced a 40-per-cent gain in longevity among the rodents.

Schreyer Outlaws Slush Funds

By CLEMENT CHAPPEL

VANCOUVER — Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba said here Monday that his NDP government was moving to outlaw the payment of political "slush funds" to the party that holds power.

Mr. Schreyer, who arrived from Manitoba to lend "moral support" to the NDP election campaign in B.C., said, "democracy is the poorer for it" when lavish advertising campaigns, paid for by the donations of big business, were used during election campaigns.

At a press conference shortly after his arrival at 3 p.m. Monday, Mr. Schreyer added that large advertisements in newspapers for government departments just before elections were "an abuse of the Elections Act" and "a misuse of public money."

The 33-year-old Manitoba premier said he had not seen any such advertisements in B.C. newspapers, but he had seen them in Manitoba.

The slush funds, he said, had stopped when he "blundered into them" two months after becoming premier — the first provincial NDP premier in Canada's history.

Without appearing to cite a specific case, Mr. Schreyer spoke of "an architect who calls up and says, 'Who do I send the 5 per cent to?'"

Mr. Schreyer said his reply was, "What 5 per cent?" and the caller was referred to the minister of finance. There was no law yet prohibiting the slush fund, which had probably some thousands of dollars, he said, but it would be NDP policy in Manitoba to refuse acceptance of the funds and eventually prohibit them.

He said he learned subsequently that these funds had often been paid "clandestinely" to the party holding power, and in a way "often not in the public interest."

In Winnipeg, former Manitoba premier Walter Weir said Monday his Progressive Conservative government received no kickbacks on government contracts.

"I have no idea of arrangements of this type," said Mr. Weir, opposition leader. "It's news to me."

"There were no telephone calls while I was in office," said Mr. Weir, referring to Mr. Schreyer's statement that he received a call from an architect who asked "where do I send my 5 per cent?"

Finance Minister Saul Cherniack said in an interview that he had received a phone call.

"I've been sitting on it for some time. I don't know whether it was the same person."

Mr. Cherniack said he "would rather wait for the premier to return" before commenting further.

Mr. Weir suggested: "the only possible reason for making the statement could be in preparation for the B.C. campaign."

Mr. Weir did not elaborate but said he did not know why Mr. Schreyer did not make the statement in Manitoba.

NDP Rally

Berger's Finale Hailed by 6,000

VANCOUVER—More than 6,000 at a rally Monday night in Queen's Park Arena in New Westminster gave NDP leader Tom Berger and Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer a standing ovation.

Mr. Schreyer told the meeting "It is not easy to buck the establishment, but buck it we must." He urged the party to "keep on with your noble objectives."

Mr. Schreyer said he was convinced Mr. Berger would be able to provide "prudent and sound government" for B.C.

Mr. Berger, in his last major election campaign speech, promised that a bill of rights brought into the legislature by for British Columbians would be the first piece of legislation by an NDP government.

Repeating his earlier promise that the office of provincial ombudsman would be created, Mr. Berger said, "And I can tell you this — it won't be Phil Gaglardi."

'GOING DOWN'

Each cabinet minister who has used his name in government department advertisements during the campaign "is going down to defeat in this election," Mr. Berger said, bringing a tremendous cheer from the packed arena.

Mr. Berger promised that he would "put temptation out of the reach of politicians" by prohibiting government advertising during election campaigns.

Israeli military officials said there were no casualties or damage.

One of the missiles landed near the crowded Ganei Yehuda Hotel and the second slammed into the city's Baqa'a district.

Israeli officials said they immediately ordered a search for the guerrillas. The rockets are about six feet long and weigh 100 pounds and can be fired from an improvised launcher.

Jerusalem Shelled By Arabs

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Arab guerrillas fired two Soviet-made rockets into the heart of Jerusalem early Tuesday — the first shelling of the Israeli city since the 1967 Middle East war.

Israeli military officials said there were no casualties or damage.

Earlier, Mr. Bennett told a press conference here: "I ask for every vote — we need every vote."

The premier said B.C. must have a free enterprise government to keep moving ahead and if the promise of future greatness is to be fulfilled, that government must be Social Credit.

"We have not yet reached the zenith. We intend to keep moving ahead because the decade of the 70s will be the greatest ever seen, not only in this province, but in the history of this great nation," Mr. Bennett said.

EASY FOR HIM

He made his final appeal over two television channels in times purchased by the Social Credit party. The program, which also featured Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island Socreds, continued with an interruption for late night news broadcasts until midnight — the deadline for all broadcast election material.

At the press conference in the Hotel Vancouver, Mr. Bennett talked over the election issues, looked fit and relaxed as he said the campaign was "the easiest for me personally," but acknowledged that Social Credit faces a tough battle at the polls.

He was asked if the government was re-elected whether he

Socreds Ended Scheme

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier Bennett said Monday kickbacks on government contracts in B.C. stopped Aug. 1, 1952, when Social Credit came to power.

He was commenting on a statement by Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer that he plans to end a system where professional firms gave a percentage of their fees back to the Manitoba governing party on government contracts.

CARIBOO SAVING

"We abolished all that political patronage," Premier Bennett said at a news conference. "When we were building the Cariboo road we saved 42 per cent on unit prices on that one and millions and millions of dollars elsewhere."

Camel Caravan Reopens Route Of Marco Polo

GILGIT, Pakistan (Reuters) — A caravan of 15 camels laden with Chinese goods reached Misgar, 127 miles northwest of here, Monday after reopening the ancient silk route between China and Pakistan.

The trade route over what has been described as the world's most difficult terrain in the Karakoram Mountains was travelled by the 13th century globetrotter Marco Polo. But it was closed 20 years ago after the Communists gained power in China.

The caravan which swayed into the little West Pakistan border town was accompanied by 16 Chinese traders mounted on horses.

The packs slung across the animals' backs contained goods worth 300,000 rupees (more than $20,000) and will be offered for sale in Misgar market today.

The route was reopened under a trade agreement between the two countries signed in October, 1967.

Gas Tank Hides Girl

ST. GALLEN, SWITZERLAND (AP) — A Swiss engineer told Monday how he smuggled his 19-year-old East German fiancée 200 miles to freedom in the converted gasoline tank of his English automobile.

Talf Baldeweg, 27, brought his bride-to-be — Friedl Linka — across Hungary and Yugoslavia to the safety of Austria.

The girl went on a camping vacation to Lake Balaton, Hungary, where she had arranged to meet Baldeweg.

Baldeweg paid $1,000 for a large Alvis special car and set to work fitting a 22-gallon gas tank. But it held only four gallons. The rest was a cramped compartment for the girl with a thin air tube.

Ten days ago their flight to freedom began. "I don't know how we got through," said the brunette from Dresden. "At times I thought I was going to die in there."

Baldeweg said that twice, after passing the Hungarian and Yugoslav frontiers, he pulled his fiancée out of the compartment.

"She was unconscious and turning blue," he said.

Intends to try and remain premier indefinitely.

Mr. Bennett repeated his earlier statement that given voter support and good health, he would continue. "This is what my life is all about. The most important thing in a democracy is making it work," he said.

WOULDN'T SAY

The premier refused to be drawn into a discussion on the choice of a possible successor. He was asked about the prospect of Atty. Gen. Leslie Peterson and replied, "I think he'd make a good premier, but the selection isn't up to me."

Mr. Bennett said there are "a lot of very clever, bright people" in Social Credit, and he added, among candidates seeking election Wednesday, there are some potential new cabinet ministers.

POTENTIAL MINISTER

He named former Vancouver Mayor William Rathie, seeking election in Point Grey, as one such potential minister, but quickly added, "I'm not saying he'll be the next premier."

Asked about the likelihood of his cabinet being restructured in the near future, Mr. Bennett said the possibility of shuffling some portfolios, including the double portfolio of labor and the attorney general, is now under study.

Changes would be made, the premier said, "as the need develops." He added: "I don't see any minister retiring, and I'm not going to ask any minister to be retired. There will be ministers without portfolio in the next cabinet."

Mr. Bennett said he has received no complaints from cabinet ministers or other Soerod candidates about his decision to reinstate P. A. Gagliardi. He said a number of telegrams received from voters all favored the move.

The premier told the press conference: "I went out at lunchtime today and not one but dozens of people stopped me. They said they had voted Liberal in the past but now they are going to vote for us. They are not really voting for Social Credit but for a three-way alliance."

Mr. Bennett leaves this morning by car for Kelowna, where he will vote tomorrow and spend the day touring polling booths in his riding of South Okanagan.

net did not refer specifically to past administrations.

Commenting on Mr. Schreyer's visit here to address a rally Monday night in New Westminster in support of New Democratic Party leader Tom Berger, the premier said:

"I hope he enjoys the weather here and by that I don't mean the political weather."

He said that instead of coming here, Mr. Schreyer should stay in Manitoba and get down to the business of eliminating hospital premiums, amusement and automobile taxes which do not exist in B.C.

Mr. Bennett said he'd like to return the visit "and get the Liberals and the Conservatives together in Manitoba and run a free enterprise election in Manitoba and throw the socialists out."

Your Good Health

Deformed Baby Threat High in German Measles

By G. T. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughters, aged 21 and 25, never have had mumps or German measles. The older girl had regular measles, but the younger one had gamma globulin injection, and we never knew whether she had measles then. She had a slight rash. Do you recommend injections at this age for either or both? I get varied opinions from doctors.—A. G.

As to mumps vaccine, at the girls' ages I would not think it necessary, but it is interesting to note that you have had varied opinions from other doctors.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: If a lady, 68, had stomach x-rays and did not notice a big safety pin that was left in the gown by someone else, would it interfere with the x-rays and would that be dangerous?—M. M.

No. Doubtless the doctor who read the x-rays said, "Now who the dickens left a safety pin in the patient's gown?" but that's all.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When a doctor diagnoses a fibroid uterus, is the uterus removed along with the fibroids?—F. K.

Ordinarily yes—provided the fibroids are causing enough trouble to warrant removal. In a great many instances, however, the fibroids do not cause trouble, and are not removed, but merely watched, lest they change size or otherwise give indication that removal is in order. Many times fibroids will shrink after menopause.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How effective is home electrolysis treatment, the type you order by mail? Professional electrolysis treatments are so expensive.

I am 23 and plagued with unwanted coarse hair on the face and around the breast. How can I get rid of it?—A. W.

Superfluous hair is usually a familiar matter. People of some nationalities are more subject to it; it also runs in families.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For nine years I have had an underactive thyroid and take three grains of thyroid hormone a day. Otherwise I am healthy. I have a daughter, 11, but would like to have another baby. What risk would be involved? I am 34.—Mrs. C. S.

I don't see that any risk is involved.

Note to Mrs. A. R. B.: The so-called "cholesterol danger" from eggs has been much exaggerated in my opinion, but if your family doesn't like them there's no reason why you can't get protein from cheese, meat, fish, and fowl.

a variety of sources both inside and outside the party. He said it should be found out "where the NDP get theirs."

Commenting further on the telephone call offering a kick back, Mr. Weir said Mr. Schreyer "is the first premier in my knowledge that would get that kind of phone call."

The NDP defeated Mr. Weir's administration in the June 25 general election. Asked if a crackdown on slush funds would mean disclosure of facts, Mr. Schreyer said: "We will want to make some documentation of a practice that was apparently not publicly known."

"It has stopped, de facto — but the law hasn't changed," he said.

Asked if he expected to be accused by the B.C. premier of being an "imported" election organizer, Mr. Schreyer said, referring to the B.C. premier: "Any man who professes to be concerned about election practices" should be prepared to bring in government legislation, to bring election funds and practices "out in the open."

Mr. Schreyer volunteered that there was "ample precedent" for a premier of an outside province to enter into an election campaign not his own, but "I would be a little surprised if there is not questioning that I agreed to speak at a rally." (He appeared at an NDP rally in New Westminster Monday night.)

Mr. Schreyer said Mr. Bennett himself had "a number of times" done this, and so had former Manitoba premier Duff Roblin.

Asked to comment on policies that B.C.'s NDP leader Tom Berger is promoting in the current campaign, Mr. Schreyer said he was "a little agast" that people in B.C. should fear a government takeover of the B.C. Telephone Co.

Manitoba's telephone system has been public since the early 1900s, and this "hasn't resulted in any diminution of civil rights," he said.

He said his government was also looking at government-run car insurance, a policy promised by Mr. Berger, should he win the Wednesday election.

Mr. Schreyer said there was already NDP legislation "in the works" in Manitoba to create the office of an ombudsman, and he said it was important to have a stenographic record of legislative debates.

He said he would concede that Manitoba was behind British Columbia in its medicare system, but his government had already moved to reduce the medicare premiums from $117 a year for family by $17 a year.

He said the first NDP government bond issue of $20,000,000 had just recently been taken up at 8 per cent in the Toronto market.

He said he hoped this would do something to fight those "who engage in the pandering of false fear" that NDP provincial governments would scare away investments.

Mr. Schreyer said some members of the Winnipeg Chamber of Commerce reacted to his surprise election win with "cross-eyed terror," but in a few weeks they saw they had been the victims of their own propaganda and doom-saying.

Executives of a large Swiss forest products firm came to him to renegotiate a lumber-use contract made by the last government and agreed to return 6,000 square miles of land to the province and to keep raw logs inside Manitoba's borders.

"It is simply second-best to export raw materials," Mr. Schreyer said.

Mr. Schreyer also said that Douglas Fisher, former MP for the Port Arthur riding and now a political columnist, "could very well become" the NDP's candidate in the Selkirk federal riding.

Selkirk is the commons seat that Mr. Schreyer left to assume leadership of the Manitoba party three weeks prior to that province's June 25 general election.

No date has been set for the Selkirk byelection. In last year's federal election, Mr. Schreyer won the seat by more than 3,200 votes over a Liberal.

Battle Plan May Halt Oil to U.S.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israel jets bombed Arab guerrilla camps in Jordan Monday, gunfire crackled on all other Middle East fronts and Palestinian guerrillas proposed a radical battle plan to foreign ministers of 14 Arab countries meeting in Cairo.

The plan would mobilize all Arab armies and economies in the fight against Israel coupled with a political and economic boycott of the United States and other Western nations accused of supporting the Jewish state. It could again halt the flow of Arab oil to the West.

Israeli planes conducted two bombing raids on camps in northern Jordan following the death of two Israeli soldiers by a guerrilla ambush.

Rohan rests on prison cot

Five Guerrillas Die

Five Arab guerrillas were killed by Israeli troops in a clash in the occupied Golan Heights of Syria, spokesmen in Tel Aviv reported.

Artillery duels between Israeli and Egyptian guns continue along the Suez Canal. Anti-Israeli sentiment remained high in the Arab world because of the fire at the Al Aqsa Mosque in Jerusalem. Israel reacted bitterly to the hanging of 15 alleged spies, including two Jews in Iraq.

The Palestinian guerrillas' battle plan, outlined by Egypt's official Middle East News Agency, was presented to the Arab foreign ministers meeting in Cairo to discuss emotion-charged calls for jihad—holy war—that followed the mosque fire.

Its provisions include:

- Placing all Arab armies under a single command.
- Mobilization of the Arab economies in the service of war against Israel and the use of Arab oil as a strategic weapon.
- A political and economic boycott of the United States, Britain and West Germany, all accused in the Arab world of supporting Israel.
- The establishment of close relations with Communist nations in light of their support for the Arab and Palestine causes.
- Increased support for the Palestine guerrilla movement.

Source in Doubt

If adopted, the plan might again cut off Arab oil to the West. It was stopped briefly after the 1967 Arab-Israel war but such countries as Kuwait and Saudi Arabia discovered their economies were hit harder than those of Western countries.

In Jerusalem, Attorney-General Meir Shamgar told a special committee appointed to investigate the Al Aqsa Mosque blaze that a man held by Israeli authorities has confessed. He is Michael Dennis William Rohan, 28, an Australian sheep shearer. But Shamgar's statement did little to cool Moslem outrage, and Arab capitals continued to blame Israel for the fire.

Capitalizing on the rare show of Arab unity created by the fire, Jordanian Foreign Minister Abdul Munim Rifai told reporters his country will press its call for a summit conference of Arab leaders at the Cairo meeting.

Saudi Arabia's King Faisal, who has ordered his forces on full alert for the coming day of jihad, has endorsed the idea of an Islamic summit meeting. This presumably would include non-Arab countries such as Pakistan and Indonesia, an unlikely prospect according to Middle East observers.

Doubt Already Exists

These observers say even an exclusively Arab summit may be a long way off, since radical Arab states such as Syria already are expressing reservations about sitting at the same table as the traditional monarchies, such as Jordan and Saudi Arabia.

The execution in Baghdad of 15 Iraqis on spy charges raised to 51 the total of alleged spies executed in Iraq this year, including 11 Jews. Baghdad radio did not give any details beyond saying the victims had conducted espionage activities for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and for Israel.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban denounced Iraq, saying: "With these additional hangings, the Iraqi regime, whose barbaric character is known to the world, proves that this government has returned to its foul ways."

The Board of Deputies of British Jews in London called it "a wilful act of savagery," and Israel's chief rabbi, Yitzhak Nissim, said Iraq displayed "terrible decadence and indescribable degeneracy."

The Vatican newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, said Pope Paul VI had unsuccessfully appealed for clemency on behalf of the 15 accused to the Baghdad government. Last January he made a similar appeal on behalf of 14 other Iraqis who were hanged.

State Secretary William Rogers of the United States said the executions could only be a matter of serious concern throughout the world. United Nations Secretary-General U Thant expressed fear they would heighten Middle East tension.

Czech Police Complain

Casualty Figures Don't Jibe

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovakia suffered hundreds of casualties from rioting on the first anniversary of the Soviet invasion and there were angry Communist charges Monday that hospitals neglected aid for injured police and troops.

The Communist party daily Rude Pravo also said "several hundred" police and troops were injured, far exceeding the civilian casualty toll and that this in itself disproved reports of police brutality.

BOY SUCCUMBS
Streets were crowded but quiet Monday as police and soldiers with carbines or sub-machine-guns patrolled in twos or threes.

Independent checks of three Prague hospitals by reporters showed that at least four civilians, including a 14-year-old boy shot in the stomach, died in the capital and at least 70 were sent to hospital.

Counting four civilians reported killed in Brno, Czechoslovakia's second-largest city, the minimum death toll was eight.

Rude Pravo asserted, however, "On the whole territory of Czechoslovakia, 29 demonstrators were injured lightly and seven seriously, of whom five unfortunately died."

POLICE CLUBS
It declared that in contrast to this "several hundred" policemen and army soldiers were hurt, 25 severely.

An independent survey showed that one central Prague hospital took in about 60 civilian patients during the disturbances, most suffering from beatings by police clubs.

A source said many wounded were taken directly to prison hospitals.

Li-Col. Jiri Hecko, an army political officer, complained in Rude Pravo that medical staffs "could not do enough for the hooligans who had, for example, only gotten a whiff of tear gas," while neglecting injured members of the riot control forces.

Radio broadcasts and newspapers said a captain with an injured eye was denounced by an ambulance crew as a "Gestapo man" who really deserved to have both eyes "finished off."

"These and other deeds of pure and unadulterated patriotism and truly Christian samaritanism will not remain without appropriate reward," Hecko said.

The newspaper Prace said Prague's Vrsovice Hospital refused outpatient treatment to ## Congress Party at Peace

Mrs. Ghandi Victor

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi clinched victory Monday night over the rightist Congress party bosses with whom she had been feuding for six weeks.

She and leaders of her badly split, but still governing, Congress party agreed after a 2½-hour meeting to patch up their differences in the name of organizational unity.

A meeting of the 21-member Congress working committee adopted a tepid resolution calling for the end of the political strife that has threatened to destroy India's only national party.

Before the meeting there had been widespread speculation that Mrs. Gandhi's enemies, defeated so far at every turn, would make one last attempt to oust her from the leadership.

The resolution seemed to be in Mrs. Gandhi's favor. Although it stated that it was "painful and unfortunate" that many congressmen had failed to support the party's official nominee, Sanjiva Reddy, in the recent presidential election won by independent V. V. Giri—it called for "strict adherence to party policies and programs."

Mrs. Gandhi's contention throughout the struggle has been that unity can be forged only in the name of the socialist platform of the Congress.

Mrs. Gandhi supported Giri in order to humble the party bosses—known as "the Syndicate"—who had backed Reddy, her political foe.

A separate, face-saving resolution exonerated Siddavana Halli Nijalingappa, party president, of unspecified "allegations"—an obvious reference to Mrs. Gandhi's charges that he had negotiated with right-wing parties for support of Reddy's candidacy.

Congress party spokesman Sadhu Ali told reporters the body had not pursued Nijalingappa's demand for Mrs. Gandhi to explain her failure to support Reddy.

More Democratic

THE B.C. TEACHERS' FEDERATION, in seeking a better finance formula for schools, objects particularly to the "undemocratic" referendum system which may be called into use when a district's proposed operating budget exceeds 110 per cent of the cost of a basic program. Calling any referendum undemocratic is something of a paradox. The paradox is emphasized moreover by the fact the teachers would prefer that the electors be given no opportunity to say yes or no to an operating budget. Nevertheless they have good reason for use of the expression.

The claim that the referendum is undemocratic is based on two aspects of the voting: that a 60-per-cent affirmative vote is required to pass a bylaw, and that only property-owners are entitled to register their wishes.

Thus, Mr. C. D. Ovans, general secretary of the federation can write, "Forty per cent of the ratepayers can prohibit any school board from spending more than 110 per cent of the basic education program determined by the minister of education. The apartment owner votes; the tenants with children living in his building do not."

Certainly the referendum would be more democratic if only a bare majority were required for approval. The 60-per-cent rule applies to school and municipal borrowing bylaws, but perhaps with better reason. The decision to borrow is of long-lasting consequence and irrevocable; the decision on a school budget is only for a year.

As for voting eligibility, even those who have objected in the past to tenants having the right to vote on borrowing bylaws on the grounds that tenants are more mobile than owners, and can more readily escape the results of local-government borrowing, must perceive that circumstances are fast changing. Not only is apartment-dwelling greatly increasing, but the home-owner himself is more frequently changing his place of residence.

The tenant is no more apt to be capricious about spending and taxes than the owner.

In fact it is rather surprising that Mr. Ovans would plead for the apartment-dwellers, and he must be congratulated on his altruism. The people in apartments—usually without children—are probably the teachers' least likely allies when it comes to passing a school budget bylaw. But we agree that, if the referendum system is to continue, they should have the vote.

Right of Dissent

THE DISMISSAL OF STANLEY GRAY from his post as lecturer at McGill University "is not an abridgement of academic freedom but its vigorous reassertion and defence," says The Gazette, Montreal, in reviewing the case of the man who sought by coercion to expedite reforms he favored.

Mr. Gray, it may be recalled, was dismissed following a long period of acrimonious exchanges which culminated in the riot of March 28 which was intended, among other things, to emphasize the demand of that faction—including Mr. Gray—who wanted to change the character of the university, to make it "McGill Francais," in fact. The three-man arbitration board which was subsequently established to review the case, with both sides agreeing to accept its findings, has now ruled:

"We reluctantly conclude that there is sufficient ground for dismissal. We believe it would be naive at this time, in view of Mr. Gray's declared intention to go on with his activities, to come to a conclusion that he could be persuaded that his course of conduct is unacceptable."

Mr. Gray who is 24, an admitted Marxist activist, had an extraordinary record during his brief time with the university. He participated in demonstrations which broke up meetings of the directors, the faculty senate and other official groups. His classes in political science are reported to have been tumultuous.

Pedantry, even prejudice, may be acceptable in the lecture-room. Either can be stimulating. Revolutionary ideas, in political science or anything else, are always worth examination.

It is when it is attempted to cram theories down the throats of those who disagree with them that the reformists get beyond acceptable bounds.

The findings of the arbitration board in Mr. Gray's case may have a salutary effect in that they indicate a limit beyond which freedom of expression becomes what the McGill authorities called "gross misconduct," and "attempted coercion by disruption."

The right of dissent must always be defended, but let it be kept within the bounds of reasonable dialogue.

Saigon Triumvirate

SOUTH VIETNAM'S PRESIDENT Nguyen Van Thieu has selected a successor to Premier Tran Van Huong in the person of General Tran Thien Khiem. With Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky, three generals now comprise the triumvirate which, in effect, rules the country.

No doubt Premier-designate Khiem is a capable man. He has been vice-premier since the government reorganization of May 1968, and his chief responsibility has been civil pacification—the winning of the countryside to the Saigon government. He has a reputation as an administrator.

President Thieu believes he is the strongest man in the cabinet, and on this basis has promoted him to succeed the ailing Mr. Huong.

But the Saigon government commences to look more and more like a military dictatorship—perhaps inevitable in the circumstances—and is therefore unlikely to impress its antagonists with its sincerity in an announced program of democratization of the administration. A junta of generals and a democratic legislative body do not appear to be compatible companions.

If President Thieu can make such a partnership work satisfactorily it will be surprising. And it would be more encouraging to those who support his resistance to Communism if he could bring a stronger civilian power to the executive and a broader political representation to the elected body.

But first he will have to overcome the reluctance of minority leaders to forget their little animosities and persuade them to work together for the larger reward: true independence and the freedoms that go with it.

Action Shifts to Syrian Front

By IRENE BEESON

Hopes for Political Solution Abandoned, Damascus Sees Mid-East War as Inevitable

SIGNIFICANT changes in Syria's attitude to the Arab-Israeli conflict are evident to the visitor to Damascus. Everywhere there are fedayeen and posters calling for support of the Palestine resistance movement. There is a new popular mood of militancy which is quite distinct from the traditionally tough official line.

Recent spurs of military activity on the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights and Mount Hermon, some of which were initiated by Syria, were seen in the area as indications that Damascus was moving away from its purely vocal role of extreme militancy. The incidents were interpreted as a "hotting up" of the Syrian ceasefire line, which would relieve pressure on the Eastern (Jordanian) and Western (Egyptian) fronts by forcing Israel to move reinforcement to the north.

I flew to Damascus from Athens the day after a Syrian air attack on Israeli military positions on Mount Hermon. Damascus airport had been closed for several hours, in expectation of an Israeli retaliatory raid. The flight was delayed while the air line office in Athens awaited an "all clear" from headquarters in Budapest.

On the way from the airport to Damascus, the taxi driver gave a vivid description of the air battle. He had been particularly impressed by the "air umbrella" the Syrian air force had deployed over Damascus of "hundreds of aircraft" flying over the city while the attack was in progress.

There was no Israeli punitive attack. Instead, Israel's Defence Minister General Moshe Dayan, threatened that if escalation and attacks from Syria continued on the Eastern Front, Israel might feel compelled to advance further into Arab territories. The Syrian front was quiet during the whole of my week's stay in Damascus, but MIGs streaking across the sky in daylong flights maintained the atmosphere of crisis.

Despite the wide publicity given to the Syrian air attack and popular enthusiasm for the "new active Syrian role," it was clear from talks with government and army officials, that Syria is not prepared and certainly not eager to be dragged into battle in the present situation. They stressed that recent spasmodic fighting on the Syrian front was the result of Israeli presence and military activities. The situation on the ceasefire line could develop into a permanent state of war—similar to that on the Suez Canal and the River Jordan—they said, but "Syria will not start deterioration."

Syrians point out that events in the two years since the June 1967 ceasefire have confirmed the Damascus belief that a political solution of the conflict is out of the question and that the other Arab governments have rallied to their view. There will be a war. There must be a war, they say. But not yet. The Arabs must choose their own time. There must not be another Arab defeat.

Maintaining the people's morale, building up the army and the country's economy while at the same time protecting the regime amounts to an extremely delicate balancing feat. The government realizes that a strong, stable economy will be as essential as a strong well-trained army in what is considered as the inevitable battle. But many Syrians, humiliated by the loss to Israel of the Golan Heights and plateau and fired by the examples of Egyptian, Jordanian and Palestinian fighting, would prefer to cast all caution to the winds and launch a "battle of liberation" now, regardless of consequences.

To keep this war fervor or fever in check, the ruling Syrian Baath Party, encouraged the formation in March, 1969, of its own Palestinian liberation group, As Saika (the Thunderbolt) and in recent weeks Syria has officially relaxed rules about infiltrating into Israel from Syria.

The fact that most commando operations continue to be launched against Israeli-held Syrian territory from Jordan and Lebanon, bringing retaliation on those two countries, is not due to Damascus directives, a Palestine liberation organization spokesman said. "Palestinians do not apply for or receive licences to fight. No Arab government is in a position to authorize or prevent us from fighting from its territory."

"We fight from wherever it is most convenient for us. This is our right," he explained. "And we choose to fight from the territory best suited to us." There was close collaboration between the fedayeen and the Syrian armed forces, the spokesman said. "We are all one. The fedayeen and the Syrian soldier are both children of the people."

Unlike El Fatah, which is a strictly non-political body, refusing allegiance or guidance from any Arab government or political group, As Saika is, in fact, an offshoot of the Syrian government. As Saika commands sometimes co-operated with El Fatah and there were close ties between the two groups, I was told. Difficulties and opposition to the fedayeen in the Lebanon and Jordan were bringing them even closer together. "El Fatah and As Saika, the two main resistance groups, share the responsibility of uniting all the other groups. Opposition is speeding up the process."

Arabs who are critical of the Syrian regime claim that the aim of the Baath Party in creating its own commando group was directed more at protecting the regime and strengthening its image in the rest of the Arab world than at fighting for Palestine at the risk of involving Syria in a new armed confrontation with Israel at a time which is not of its choice. They suspect, too, that political activity in the "non-progressive" Arab countries is high on the Baath agenda for As Saika.

Others argue that even if this were the case, the majority of boys and men who join As Saika are first and foremost Palestinian nationalists. Strong as their attachment is to the Baath Party, it will be outweighed by fervor to fight for their own cause.

Escalation of fighting by El Fatah, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and other groups, is in itself a form of indirect pressure on hesitant Arab governments and political parties, they say, and point to the examples of Jordan and Lebanon where all attempts to bring the fedayeen to heel have failed.

Popular pressure to vindicate Arab pride by liberating the occupied territories grows with every new commando communique. Collaborating with the fedayeen and ultimately entering the battle are the only means of protection for Arab regimes today, they argue. "Hotting up the Syrian front cannot now be delayed much longer without endangering the very structure of the ruling Syrian Baath Party."

The new Syrian approach to the fedayeen, occasional sorties by the Syrian air force, infiltrations into Israeli territory from Syria, are all indications that the Syrian government is aware of what is at stake.

Others argue that even if this

Soviet Hero Declassified

Kuznetsov's Defection Mocks His Old Admirers

By PETER WORTHINGTON

THE Great Soviet Encyclopedia is the official bible of what Soviet orthodox considers to be "facts."

Facts in the USSR, don't necessarily coincide with "truth."

The encyclopedia is periodically adjusted in accordance with the winds of change that sweep through the Kremlin from time to time. This is called "cleansing," which is defined as "purging."

The Great Soviet Encyclopedia has been purged many times, as have past Soviet leaders. "Facts" have been amended, adjusted, reversed, even dropped. Just as individuals—like Mr. Khrushchev—can become un-persons, so can entries in the encyclopedia become "un-facts."

But while they exist, what appears in the Great Soviet Encyclopedia must be regarded as the voice of Soviet officialdom.

In July Anatole Kuznetsov, one of the rising red stars of Soviet literature, sought political asylum in Britain and turned on his erstwhile masters in a most articulate and damning manner. He renounced previous writings, saying that nothing that he had written from the heart had appeared in print in its true form.

He said every Soviet writer had to work with the secret police, to spy and inform on colleagues, to prostitute himself in order to survive. He admitted that he himself had done this, before escaping.

Today the Soviets are heaping abuse on Kuznetsov. Understandably they call him a traitor.

Yet the Great Soviet Encyclopedia praises him as a sincere spokesman of contemporary Soviet youth—a true representative of new Soviet man—an image of the future Communist generation."

Kuznetsov was recently appointed a member of the editorial board of Yunost, the influential Soviet youth magazine. This, in an era of what might modestly be called "re-Stalinization," indicates the favor in which he was held.

Much has been written about Kuznetsov recently. He has eloquently described his reasons for seeking asylum.

The official Soviet youth newspaper, Komsomolskaya Pravda, has written about its onetime hero, Anatole Kuznetsov. Here, in condensed form, is the Soviet reaction:

"The Soviet people call Kuznetsov's flight treason—despicable, low treason. The baseness of this treason is marked not only by its surprise, but by its perfidy."

"First it is disgusting by its cynicism in admitting duplicity. Kuznetsov himself admits: 'I have been planning my escape for a long time.'"

"This means that a man who was walking in our land was in his heart a turncoat and used to the idea of treason. This means that in the articles, novels and short stories that he had been writing, he was not saying what he thought and wanted to say. On the contrary he was carefully covering up his thoughts and secret desires and just waiting for a 'better time' and a safer situation to unleash his abuse."

"He allowed himself to become a member of the editorial board of Yunost, while all the time counting the days when it would be possible to change his skin.

"All the time he gave the impression to foreigners, to guests in our country, of being an incorruptible Soviet writer, ready to fight for the holy principles of our country, our ideals, our morals. But simultaneously he was inwardly longing for the so-called 'freedoms' and 'values' of the capitalistic world."

"Thus, day in and day out, he pretended, falsified, played the buffoon. What a pitiful, difficult, despicable existence!"

"Having betrayed his old friends he will now start looking for new friends—or at least accomplices. It is difficult to see Kuznetsov gaining much pleasure in the forecasts being made about his future."

"He has made a statement denouncing his past, his fatherland, everything that he had published. Burning all bridges, he has denounced himself, saying: 'Forget about the author Anatole Kuznetsov. From now on my name will be Monsieur A. Anatole.'"

"Is that a farce? A parody on a tragedy of a personality? Or is it the complete collapse of consciousness, intellect, the ego?"

"But are these categories of personality applicable to traitors? Surely not. Only contempt—this is what the deserter has earned for himself."

This then is what Komsomolskaya Pravda thinks of Anatole Kuznetsov, the man the current Great Soviet Encyclopedia considers to be the "sincere spokesman of contemporary Soviet youth."

It seems certain that neither the Kremlin nor the author has yet had the last word; many gaffes are yet to come.

Ulster Picture In Perspective

AS A North Irish man spending a vacation in your lovely country I am astounded at your presentation of the current news from Northern Ireland.

In your publication of Tuesday, August 19, you head your leading No. 1 page, "Nine-Year-Old Irish Martyr Buried." Now I ask you? Is this the way to keep your reading public informed on Northern Ireland affairs, by implying to them that all Roman Catholic citizens of Northern Ireland are martyrs, dying for their beloved land?

Surely it must be clear to the best informed that the majority in Northern Ireland are Protestants who have been born and reared there; and are just every bit as entitled to be called martyrs as our Roman Catholic fellow countrymen are, so why pick out a Roman Catholic from a Protestant?

Is it because you deliberately, from some cause unknown or not disclosed to your readers, desire to direct their minds to this way of thinking?

During the past week, in your columns you speak of discrimination against Roman Catholic people in Northern Ireland. Are you really aware of the true facts?

Take my own town of Lurgan in which I am a member of the Town Council, and a Justice of the Peace for the County of Armagh.

Housing: The town has approximately 80 new houses built which have been lying idle for the past three-four months because we cannot find tenants for them. Available to anyone.

Jobs: Approximately 500-1,000 jobs for mill employees are available for people who want them in the Goudygar factory. This firm has had to bring in, from many other towns, men and women to staff the factory, and still the above jobs are available, and I could quote more examples if required to do so. Approximately 200-300 jobs are available for female operatives in Banner Textiles Ltd.

Factories in Northern Ireland will employ anyone no matter what their religion is, if they are fit to do the job best, as I know from a wide experience of being a member of various employer organizations.

The true facts are that there is a percentage of 7-10 who do not want to work as long as they can claim a substantial allowance for unemployment or health benefits. Here again I can quote actual cases if required to do so. The financial payments received by these people are almost equal to weekly wages they would receive in the factories but they prefer to stay at home.

In our town, which is a fair example of most towns in Northern Ireland, Roman Catholic and Protestant citizens have, up to now, lived and worked together peaceably and would continue to do so if left alone.

In June-July of this year, three members of the Communist Party visited Lurgan and conferred with members of an extremist organization. They requested the use of the Town Hall to hold a meeting, which was refused on the grounds that the council, in its wisdom, did not want to have strife and friction between its citizens, but these people went ahead and held their meeting elsewhere, and from this they brought unrest to the town. The exact same pattern has happened in Londonderry and Belfast, and also in many other towns.

The aim of this group is to bring the largely Protestant north into union with the predominantly Catholic south, and essentially take control of all Ireland. This is no vain boast. It is on record in the publication of their illegal newspaper, United Irishman.

I leave the remainder of your readers to judge for themselves the cause of the present troubles in Northern Ireland, which from the above is not discrimination in jobs, housing, voting rights, as implied in your columns, and sincerely hope that you will grant me the privilege and courtesy to print this letter in your newspaper, which will help in some small way to clear away some of the misunderstandings that exist on Northern Ireland affairs.

J. DOWLING, JP.

Gifford Rd., Lurgan, County Armagh.

Position Clarified

May I through the medium of your columns take this opportunity to correct a somewhat erroneous impression that has apparently been created by certain remarks attributed to me (Daily Colonist, August 16) in a report on a meeting of the Cowichan Valley Regional Hospital District on August 13.

The report, in so far as it goes, is a correct version of my remarks but, unfortunately, when read out of context it entirely reverses the import of my statement, resulting in a number of (justifiably) irate citizens in the Chemainus area who, apparently, feel that I am advocating that Chemainus Hospital be "scrapped!"

In the first place, the fact was not mentioned that I supported Alderman Cannon's motion to endorse the action of the Chemainus Hospital Board in pressing for a new hospital, or at least to provide funds for renovation and up-dating, and that I was in fact the seconder to that motion. It then went on to imply that, although I was in favor of duplication of costly specialized equipment which was already located, or could be located, in a larger central institution, I believed that there was a reasonable hospital in Chemainus which was fulfilling a very useful purpose at the present time. I suggested, however, that if it were to continue in this role, funds were badly needed to bring it up to date. I further implied that if an entirely negative attitude was to be adopted towards its needs, it was somewhat futile to expect it to continue in this role as a self-contained hospital and it might just as well be relegated to a clinical status.

I trust that the foregoing clarifies my position and I should like to assure the residents of the Chemainus district that, although I am not myself a patron of their hospital, I fully support their cause.

JOHN F. DOBELL.

Subsidy Unjustified

Loading candidates in the present election campaign have advocated public funds for parochial and private schools.

British Columbians are fortunate in that they possess one of the finest public school systems, which is open to all students. In a recent independent study, Canadian educator, Dr. John E. Chel, stated that our province has the highest pupil-teacher ratio of any school system in Canada.

Many of the world's problems stem from segregated schools either of race, creed or color. In the public school system, the only one which our Order believes should receive public funds, all children can play, learn and grow up together in mutual understanding and respect. Segregation on any grounds cannot make a united Canada.

Religious doctrine should be taught first and foremost in the home and the church. Public funds must not be used to further dogmas of any church or religion in a country where freedom of religion is one of the cornerstones of its existence. This does not, however, exclude a study of the history of world religions.

Many private schools are strictly a private business. If these were subsidized by the public treasury, then the majority of taxpayers, who presently use the facilities of the public school system, would be placed in the position of being "double-taxed." It follows that owners of other types of private business would have the right to apply for subsidies.

The Loyal Orange Association urges each voter to seriously consider the platforms and promises of their candidates on this question, and exercise their right to vote in the best interests of unity and equality.

G. A. FERGUSON.

Provincial Grand Secretary, Loyal Orange Assn.

Thanks for Swim Service

I want to take this opportunity to say thank you to those responsible for the swim classes for the children, and a very special thank you to Mrs. Naymth and her helpers and particularly to those teachers who help her week by week.

I think it is wonderful of these teachers to give their time like this when they could really be out earning a bit of money for themselves rather than spending their time day by day with these children. They really deserve a vote of thanks from the public.

Thank you to all those who make it possible for so many children to learn to swim properly year after year. I am a very grateful mother of two children taking the lessons this year.

(Mrs.) P. A. RASHLEIGH, Box 1, Saanich.

It's Going to Be a Tight, Tough Race

By IAN STREET
Colonist Political Reporter

This election is like a paperback detective novel. It may not be very good, but once you get into it you find you can't wait until Wednesday to see how it all comes out in the end.

The suspense, for the politicians anyway, has grown almost intolerable because in this contest there is little real feedback from the public.

Does the silence of the uncommitted voter mean apathy or a secret desire for a change of government? Does the heavy advance poll reflect a big turnout Wednesday or does it merely show that in late August many people are still likely to be out of town?

If the turnout to the polls is significantly higher than the 68.28 per cent registered in 1966, the politicians argue, it is almost certain to produce either a resounding protest vote or return the government handsomely.

That's why Premier Bennett, from the start, has called this "the election of the big swing." Leaders of the opposition parties agree, but naturally all three insist their party will get enough votes to form a majority government in the next legislature.

Privately, however, party strategists are almost unanimous in their belief that this election will turn out to be a tight, tough race.

The more optimistic predict a government "with a bare majority," with odds slightly in favor of Social Credit, while the pessimists maintain the outcome will be "a real mess" with a minority government.

In 1963 and 1966 the main interest in the election wasn't whether Social Credit would be returned to govern but how many seats.

This time, B.C. Social Credit League president George Driedger says: "I'm not predicting a thing. I'm going to watch the results Wednesday then make a statement. Usually you can see a trend at this stage but with a 277,904 increase in the voters list, and in some constituencies an almost complete change-over of the electorate, we won't know until the results are in."

Both the NDP and Liberals are guarded in their predictions of Wednesday's outlook. One reason is that no one knows for sure, despite the increase in names on the voters' lists, actually how many new voters there are in the province.

Estimates of those who may either no longer live in the province or who may have moved from one riding to another, and thus appear twice, range as high as 50 per cent of the total increase.

Under B.C.'s antiquated voter registration system there is no legal way of removing a name from the list until official confirmation is received that he has registered in another riding, or a death certificate is filed.

This election, called hard on the heels of a province-wide enumeration, left no time for this formality to be completed.

An added complication is the rapid increase (twice the national average) of B.C.'s population. Together, these factors have resulted in increases of close to 100 per cent in the northern riding of Skeena and 45 per cent in South Okanagan, to name only two of those affected.

Indeed, Mr. Bennett claims it was this evidence of population growth which prompted him to call this election after only three years had elapsed in his government's five-year-term of office.

"This is the democratic process at work," the premier says. "These newcomers must know what it is all about, and an election is the only time all sides of the issues are aired."

In fact, however, apart from bread and butter issues such as pollution, hospitals, medical care, housing and social services, on which the opposition has attacked the government, the party leaders keep insisting there is only one major issue.

Mr. Bennett says it is a clear-cut question of continuing growth and improvement under the free enterprise system or of making "a sharp turn to the left" and state socialism. He's cast in the role of defender of the faith.

NDP leader Tom Berger, by the campaign's end, was insisting the whole question of integrity in government was really the fundamental issue of the election. He cites the Gagliardi affair and the Commonwealth trust fiasco. His role, prosecutor.

Liberal leader Patrick McGeer, who has waged a vigorous campaign through the interior of the province, expects to make strong gains by appealing for the support of middle-of-the-road moderates who reject extremism of either the right or the left. He is the voice of moderation.

Mr. Bennett, whose party received 45.59 per cent of the votes cast in 1966 and won 33 seats, is making his pitch directly to the ordinary citizen, the working man and the housewife. He says: "You never had it so good, why change now?"

The NDP polled a solid 33.62 per cent of the vote in 1966 and won 16 seats. The party picked up one seat from Social Credit in the Vancouver South by-election in May, 1968.

North Vietnam Bellicosity Delights Peking

Hanoi Is Going for Broke

By DENIS WARNER, from Canberra, Australia

The improvement in relations between Hanoi and Peking began about the time of the creation of the provisional revolutionary government in South Vietnam and the announcement by President Nixon that the American withdrawal of forces would begin.

After many months in which Peking publicly ignored both the Paris peace talks and the Vietnam war, the thaw has become a veritable spring flood, with the most improbably of all people, General Vo Nguyen Giap, now lending his name to the rapprochement.

There have been parties in Peking and Hanoi to celebrate the renewed links of friendship. Both Chou En-lai, the Chinese prime minister, and Huang Yung-sheng, chief of the general staff of the People's Liberation Army, turned up for the housewarming at the newly-established embassy of the provisional revolutionary government.

Giap, who wrote an entire book on the campaigns leading up to the battle for Dien Bien Phu in 1954, without once mentioning the debt he owed to Mao or his theories and who has generally been regarded as leader of the Soviet faction in Hanoi, sent a message to Peking at the beginning of August to congratulate the People's Liberation Army on the celebration of its 42nd birthday.

"The Vietnamese people and the Vietnam people's army have constantly enjoyed the great support and assistance which are full of proletarian internationalism, of brotherly Chinese people and the People's Liberation army," he said.

General Tran Nam Trung, the pseudonym for whoever happens to be commanding the communist forces in South Vietnam at the time, and who now also acts as minister of defence in the provisional revolutionary government, added his contribution, promising to strive to win complete victory in liberating the south, defending the north and proceeding towards the peaceful reunification of the fatherland.

No less significant is the abandonment by Ho Chi Minh himself of the fiction that North Vietnam merely acts as the secure rear for the Viet Cong and that North Vietnamess forces are not actively engaged in the battles in the south.

In a statement made to coincide with the anniversary of the signing of the Geneva agreements in 1954, he said: "Our armed forces and people throughout the country, millions as one man, upholding revolutionary heroism, and fearlessness of sacrifice, and hardships, are determined to carry on and step up the resistance war, with the firm resolve to fight and win, till the complete withdrawal of U.S. troops and till the total collapse of the puppet army and administration, in order to liberate the south, defend the north and proceed toward the peaceful reunification of the country."

What more could Peking ask for?

No statement ever made before by Ho Chi Minh, or by any other North Vietnamese leader, has ever spelled out policy in more uncompromising terms as these. If they were intended merely to buttress Hanoi's position at the peace talks, and were, in fact, a normal part of negotiating subterfuge, they would not have been received by Peking with the unqualified approval that we have seen since.

Some theorists argue that Giap by placing substantial reliance on the use of regular forces has contravened the basic principles of Maoist warfare. Since Giap, like the late General Nguyen Chi Thanh, whose tactics were warmly approved by Peking, has always believed in using the military in combination with the political and regulars in close collaboration with regional troops and guerrillas, I always found this view difficult to accept.

It appears to be refuted now by Giap himself. But much more importantly is the clear message for all to read that Hanoi, whether its concept of protracted war is identical with Mao's or not, has rejected the negotiated settlement in favor of winning the war on the battlefield.

Hanoi may change again. But for the moment those in Washington, and elsewhere, who profess to see in tactical shifts among the North Vietnamese forces a long-term strategic shift designed to move things along at the conference table are deluding only themselves. Hanoi is going for broke and Peking is cheering.

Economic Union Only Sensible Solution

Ireland Needs Britain

By ROBERT C. TOTH, from Belfast, N. Ireland

This divided island makes sense economically only if united, and then not very much sense unless related to Britain, its only close neighbor. For good or ill, and it's been overwhelmingly ill for seven centuries, Ireland has been an economic appendage of Britain just because of geography. In Ireland economics and politics are intertwined.

Exactly 800 years ago, in 1169, the English first invaded Ireland. Nothing except the preachings of St. Patrick has so changed the Irish destiny, not even the Viking invaders who gave Ireland its name.

A woman caused it of course. She was the wife of the warrior chief named O'Rourke and was abducted by another chief named MacMurrough, although apparently at her instigation, according to both Norman and Irish accounts.

After Mrs. O'Rourke was recaptured by her husband, MacMurrough asked the English King Henry II for help and Henry happened to have been given permission to subdue Ireland by the pope, Adrian IV, the only Englishman ever to sit on the papal throne.

The English brought their politics with their armies and soon Ireland was taking sides in English fights, always the wrong side. By the time Elizabeth gave way to James I in 1603, numerous Irish uprisings had been put down, particularly in Ulster.

Scotsmen "planted" in Ulster to pacify and convert the country were kinfolk to those who colonized America, particularly the southern states, with their guns and their bibles. They naturally sided with Protestant William of Orange in this war for the English throne against Catholic James II and the economic subjugation of the Catholic south began in earnest after William's victory.

Nature has contributed to Irish impoverishment. Land is her only resource and by the end of the 17th century, after the apprentice boys of Derry held off Catholic armies and King Billy defeated James at the Boyne, less than 1,000,000 of Ireland's 20,000,000 acres were still in Catholic hands. Land owners were Protestant and English, tenants were Irish and Catholic.

Economic rivalry replaced religious bigotry as the motive for warfare around 1800 and the English kept Ireland down in the name of its industries. British tariffs killed the Irish woolen trade. Finished iron goods from Ireland also were taxed before entry into England.

Linen manufacture was permitted, however. It had been introduced by 500 Huguenot women sent over by a grateful King William and it saved the seeds of the industrial revolution in Ireland — but only in the north.

When cotton came along, skills for weaving were available in Ulster. An engineering industry grew up to make its machinery and it expanded to shipbuilding and other products. The industrial revolution took hold in Ulster and not just because of English favoritism. As in other places in Europe, Protestant materialism far better suited the industrial revolution than Catholic humanism.

So the differences between Ulster and the rest of Ireland were accentuated, with Ulster growing prosperous and closer to England while the rest of Ireland grew poorer and angrier.

English politics toward the south brought predictable disaster in the terrible potato famine of 1845-50 when 1,000,000 Irishmen perished and 1,000,000 emigrated. Land wars followed and by 1870 England was passing laws to help tenant farmers buy their land, seating the first Catholic ever in the British parliament and even considering home rule for Ireland.

But home rule was held up by the outbreak of the First World War and in 1916 came the Easter rising in Dublin that led to the partition of Ireland into the north, with virtually all the island's industry and its Protestant population, and the pastoral and Catholic south.

Ireland has not changed much since then. Agriculture still accounts for over half of the republic's exports and its living standard is above only Portugal's and Greece's in all of Europe. Northern Ireland, tied to Britain, is more industrial and prosperous.

There would be advantages if the two could get together. The administrative cost of one government is obviously less than two. One market of 4,400,000 people is better than two markets of 1,500,000 here and 2,900,000 in the republic.

The republic would gain most, of course. It would get industry, which is eminently taxable. The industrialists up here would lose the huge British market of 55,000,000 and the average Ulsterman would suffer a serious drop in his living standard if the British subsidy — amounting to one-third of the Northern Ireland government's total expenditure — were to stop.

The obvious improvement is an economic union of Britain and Ireland. Something along this line has been underway since 1965. A free trade area agreement was signed then which will result by 1975 in the elimination of tariffs between the two nations. And if Britain gets into the European Common Market Ireland will naturally follow.

Ireland, reunified or not, cannot live without Britain. Almost 75 per cent of her exports go to Britain, 62 per cent if Ulster is excluded. Moreover, economic unity of Britain and Ireland and the gradual equalization of living standards between north and south should bring political unification nearer.

It would be fitting for economics to heal the split which, if did so much to cause long ago.

Battle-Weary A Company Heeds Veteran Sergeant

By HOUST FAAS
SONG CHANG VALLEY
 (AP) — "I am sorry sir, but my men refused to go—we cannot move out," Lieut. Eugene Shurtz Jr. reported to his battalion commander over a field telephone.

A company of the 196th Light Infantry Brigade's 3rd Battalion had been ordered at dawn Sunday to move once more down Nui Lon Mountain into a deadly labyrinth of North Vietnamese bunkers and trench lines.

For five days they had obeyed orders to make this push. Each time they had been thrown back.

The battalion commander, Lt.-Col. Robert C. Bacon, had been waiting impatiently for A Company to move out. Bacon had taken over the battalion after Lt.-Col. Eli P. Howard was killed in a helicopter crash with seven other men. Ever since the crash Tuesday, the battalion had been trying to get to the wreckage.

Sunday morning Bacon was leading three of his companies in the assault. Shurtz told him that the soldiers of A Company would not follow his orders.

"There are boys here who had enough—they are broken," the lieutenant said. "There are boys here who have only 90 days left in Vietnam. They want to go home in one piece. The situation is psychic here."

The colonel told Shurtz: "Go talk to them again and tell them to the best of our knowledge the bunkers now are empty—the enemy has withdrawn. The mission of A Company today is to recover their dead. They have no reason to be afraid."

The lieutenant came back a few minutes later: "They won't go, colonel..."

Then Bacon told his executive officer, Maj. Richard Waite, and one of his seasoned Vietnam veterans, Sgt. Okey Blakenship, to fly from the battalion base across the valley to talk with the reluctant troops of A Company.

They found the men in the tall blackened elephant grass, their uniforms ripped and caked with dirt.

"One of them was crying," said Blakenship.

A Company at one point in the fight had been down to 60 men — half its assigned combat strength.

The soldiers said they were sick of the endless battling in torrid heat. They said they had not enough sleep and that they were being pushed too hard. They hadn't had mail. They hadn't had hot food.

They believed that they were in danger of annihilation and would go no further.

"One of them yelled to me that his company had suffered too much and that it should not have to go on," Blakenship said. "I answered him that another company was down to 15 men still on the move — and I lied to him — and he asked me, 'Why did they do it?'"

"Maybe they have got something a little more than what you have got," the sergeant replied.

"Don't call us cowards, we are not cowards," the soldier howled, running toward Blakenship with his fists raised.

Blakenship turned his back and walked down the bomb-scarred ridge line to where the company commander waited.

The sergeant looked back and saw that the men of A Company were stirring. They picked up their rifles, fell into a loose formation and followed him down the crater slope.

A Company went back to war.

From UPI, AP

North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces have pulled back from the area immediately surrounding Saigon, U.S. military sources said Monday, and American commanders have responded with new tactics calling for small unit attacks against limited objectives.

The enemy has backed off," one well informed U.S. officer said. "It's a completely different war we're fighting now. We are placing greater emphasis on small unit tactics and reconnaissance as opposed to major operations."

Meanwhile, U.S. B-52s blasted an arc about 80 miles north of Saigon with up to 750 tons of explosives in a move to blunt an expected new round of North Vietnamese strikes.

All raids were within 10 miles of the key district capital of Loc Ninh, scene of bitter fighting when the Communist command kicked off its fall campaign Aug. 11-12.

● The U.S. is shipping 110,000 tons of rice to South Vietnam to alleviate an acute shortage. The U.S. mission announced Monday. Five ships carrying 55,000 tons are scheduled here Sept. 3-30. Another 55,000 tons will be shipped in October.

● From London comes a report that no solid negotiations on the end of the war are possible at the Paris peace talks until the present Saigon government is replaced with a Hanoi-approved coalition government, according to a high communist diplomatic source.

U.S. Hopes Dashed

Post-Viet Bonanza a Dream

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — President Nixon's top urban affairs spokesman dashed hopes Monday that the end of the Vietnam war would produce a windfall of federal money to meet urban problems and other domestic needs.

Daniel Moynihan, the president's special advisor for urban affairs, said inflation, defence department needs apart from the cost of fighting the Vietnam war, and the increasing cost of non-military expenditures already proposed or committed will consume most of the money.

He said earlier estimates that the war's end would release $22,900,000,000 for domestic spending "was not realistic."

"Programs already on the books and the proposals the president made in terms of mass transportation, family as-istance and state-local revenue sharing are going to eat up any revenue produced by the war's end," Moynihan said, amplifying on his remarks earlier in the day.

In addition, he said the defence department's military inventory had been depleted by the war and must be rebuilt. It also requires funds for new weapons systems and research. He said the costs of such programs as medicare and aid to education, to which the government was already committed, would rise at a projected rate "much higher than anyone had anticipated."

"We've built a lot of rising expenditures in our budget," Moynihan said. "All I was trying to say is we are not going to get the dream world people thought after the war is over."

Counteraction to Bernadette

MPs Will Tell Rest of Ulster Tale

LONDON (CP) — The United States fund-raising campaign of petite Bernadette Devlin has stung the Northern Ireland government into action.

Three and possibly four parliamentarians will fly to North America later this week to give the government's side of the story in the civil crisis and to counter statements made by the pink-sized independent member of Parliament which they say are highly inaccurate.

Capt. Lawrence Orr, MP for South Down and imperial grand master of Orangemen, will fly to Toronto Friday "to tell the truth" and will then move to Vancouver Tuesday to present "a balanced picture."

Orr, 50, is head of the Unionist party in the British Parliament.

"The situation in Ulster is not as alarming as some people make it out to be," he said in an interview from Belfast. "There have been too many false slants."

While Orr swings into Canada, Unionist MP Stratton Mills of the House of Commons and Unionist member Robin Bailie of the Northern Ireland Parliament will cover New York and Washington. They also plan to fly out Friday.

They may be joined later by Unionist MP Robert Chichester-Clark, brother of the Ulster prime minister and spokesman on Ulster at Westminster.

The Ulster government and its supporters are reported to be furious over statements that the 22-year-old Miss Devlin made in New York. She has been reported as having said that a nine-year-old boy, killed by a stray bullet, was a victim of attacks in the Catholic slum district of Bogside, Londonderry—her own community—when in fact the tragedy occurred in Belfast.

Mills said that Miss Devlin has made "some terrific inaccuracies." He and Bailie want to challenge her to a television debate in New York, or wherever else she may go.

Ulster B-Specials Cling to Weapons

BELFAST (CP) — The great majority of Northern Ireland's B-Special police reserve are keeping their arms despite British attempts to have them stacked, a responsible source said Monday.

The Associated Press reported the source as saying British authorities met reluctance to comply with the decision of Lt.-Gen. Sir Ian Freeland commander of Northern Ireland's security forces, that most B-Special arms be placed in central armories.

PLATOON RESIGNS
 In reaction to the British order, a whole platoon of 21 B-Specials at Dunmore, County Down, resigned Monday night and returned their arms and uniforms.

As a result of the general reluctance to turn in arms, it emerged that possibly 7,900 of the 8,400 B-Specials all-Protestant para-military reserve that Roman Catholics blame for the bulk of the casualties in this month's Belfast riots — still hold arms, including automatic weapons, in their homes, the informant added.

Freeland announced Friday he had asked Inspector-General Anthony Peacocke of the Royal Ulster Constabulary to start putting the Specials' arms in Belfast and Londonderry in central armories and to extend the arrangement to other towns where possible.

The source said a speeding of arms stacking will be ordered during the visit to Belfast by James Callaghan who, as British home secretary, has ultimate responsibility for internal security in Northern Ireland.

PROVINCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS ACT

NOTICE TO ABSENTEE VOTERS

If you are a temporary resident of this area, but are registered as a Provincial voter in another polling division or in another electoral district of the Province, you may vote "absentee" as follows:—

Apply on polling-day, at the polling-station established for this area, for a special (absentee) ballot. You will be required to take an affidavit that you are a registered voter, and if you are registered in another electoral district, you must know the name of that district. In your affidavit give the address at which you are registered, but in signing the poll-book give your present permanent address.

If you are registered in another polling division of this electoral district, you may vote for the candidates nominated to contest the election in this district, using an ordinary ballot. Your marked ballot will be sealed in an envelope, which will not be opened until your name has been found on the voters list for some polling division of this electoral district; if your name is not found, the envelope will not be opened and your ballot will not be counted.

If you are registered in another electoral district, the procedure is the same, except that you will be given a special ballot, on which you must write the name of the candidate* for whom you wish to vote, because there will be no printed ballots at the poll for other electoral districts. You will be given a list of the candidates running in the district in which you claim to be registered; therefore, you must know the name of that district. Before final count, the sealed ballot-envelope will be mailed to the Returning Officer for the district in which you claim to be registered, and if he cannot find your name on the voters list for that district, the envelope will not be opened and your ballot will not be counted.

The poll officials will have a list of the polling divisions and local place-names in the Province, and in many cases will be able to locate your electoral district by looking up the polling division or local place-name corresponding to your address.

It is not enough to give "Vancouver" or "Victoria" as your electoral district, because there are several electoral districts involved in each city. The poll officials will have a small map of each city showing electoral districts. If you are registered in Vancouver or Victoria but are unsure of your electoral district, locate your address on the map.

Therefore, to be sure your absentee ballot will not be wasted, know the proper name of the electoral district in which you are registered as a Provincial voter; registration as a municipal voter has no bearing on the case.

CHIEF ELECTORAL OFFICER, PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS, VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA.

replied, uncertainly: "What's new is the public concern with pollution."

With that $5,000 daily fine he made it sound like a new "get-tough" anti-pollution program.

But then he disclosed how indispensable "co-operation between all levels of government" was to its successful operation. He even conceded that if a province didn't want to go along — Quebec never has, for one — and the federal government plunged ahead on its own, Ottawa's authority could be challenged in the courts.

But the minister anticipated little but ready co-operation, and didn't think any of the provinces would take legal objections on constitutional ground that the federal government was interfering in provincial jurisdiction.

WORSE SHAPE

No other environmental element, said Lang, was "in worse shape than our once fresh waters."

Taxpayers, said Lang, were "rightfully impatient with government inaction and evasive buck-passing."

So when Parliament re-opens late in October, he promised, the federal government will be giving a high legislative priority to the new Canada Water Act.

How long it would take to put the anti-pollution program into operation and how much it would cost — or when — he seemed uncertain.

IN PRICE

But some of the cost would be passed along by industry, he suggested, in the price of the product.

As to the public's concern with "government inaction and evasive buck-passing," Lang failed to explain how his priority requirement of intergovernmental co-operation might eliminate any of it. In other developments:

● Lang announced also that he will confer Friday in Washington with U.S. Interior Secretary Walter Hickel on a new plan for clearing pollution from the Great Lakes and other international water.

● In Victoria, B.C. Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said the provincial government will co-operate with the federal crackdown but it must be accompanied by tough water quality standards. He also said the federal government must also provide funds to clean up local waters.

He ran into another question as if it were a stone wall. What about the federal government as a polluter, he was asked?

BANFF SEWAGE

He looked unbelieving for a moment and then was informed that his own department had complained that federal buildings in Banff National Park were flushing raw sewage into the Bow River.

The federal government was similarly an offender in Jasper National Park.

Then last Lang brushed this off as "inconsequential," he was reminded that the federal government has a 50-50 investment with oil companies in development of new fields in Canada's tremendous toll of fish and Arctic where a tanker has been boiled by the ice and is pouring tons of diesel distillate into the sea.

Former Northern Affairs Minister (now Public Works) Arthur Laing has warned — just a week before it happened — that just such an accident could take a Facing up to it, Lang bravely protested that "of course," the federal government itself will have to live by the rules it would enforce upon others.

Like $5,000 a day for that oil polluting the coast of the Arctic and its islands?

Bennett Hails Bond Rate As B.C. Money-Saver

By IAN STREET
VANCOUVER (Special) — Premier Bennett said here Monday his government has saved the citizens of B.C. a total of $12,500,000 over the next five years by setting an interest rate of 6 1/2 per cent on a current $20,000,000 rollover of parity bonds.

He said the final results of the rollover won't be known until Sept. 1 but predicted the entire issue would be sold by the closing date.

Asked how the sale of the bonds was progressing, Mr. Bennett replied: "I haven't heard. We'll have to wait and see what happens but I think they will all be sold by Sept. 1."

If any are still outstanding, the premier said, other government funds, excluding pension funds, will be invested in parity bonds which will be "fed out to the market from time to time."

"That's what we call sound financing," Mr. Bennett said. "We do it on the secondary market all the time. It's one of the great advantages of being in good financial shape. We didn't have to go above the market in setting the interest rate on this rollover because an increase of 1 per cent would have had to be applied to the whole $20,000,000 worth of outstanding parity bonds.

"This would have cost the citizens an extra $2,500,000 a year or $12,500,000 over five years."

ALL SOLD OUT
All previous issues of parity bonds have been completely sold out at the time of offering, he said.

Mr. Bennett commenting on a speech by NDP leader Tom Berger in Victoria, said his opponent made "a foolish statement" when he claimed an NDP government would cancel a proposed $3,000,000 loan to Commonwealth Trust and use the money instead to increase old age pensions.

"He may be a good lawyer," the premier said. "But it's obvious he has no experience in either business or government. That money hasn't been earmarked and, to qualify for the loan authorized by the legislature, Commonwealth must first put itself in good financial shape. The deadline is next March 31."

PENSIONS HIKE
"In any case I have already said we will increase old age pensions next year."

Mr. Bennett also denied a charge by former NDP leader Robert Strachan that he has a "psychopathic hatred" of Mr. Berger, who acted as counsel for G. E. P. Jones in a successful slander suit against the premier.

"Bob Strachan, whom I have known for a number of years and who is a personal friend, knows that I never hate anyone because hatred in the end consumes you. No, Strachan must be nervous. He must be fearful of defeat."

LOWER INTEREST
Mr. McKenzie said an NDP regime would not mean state socialism. There would be no dictatorial government but one which was governed by priorities and circumstances.

The candidate pledged himself to investigate ways and means of lowering bank interest, which he said was the key to the progress of small businesses.

Gyro Meeting

NDP Hopefuls Speak Quickly

Two provincial political candidates were given five minutes each to speak their pieces at a Victoria Gyro Club meeting which lasted 90 minutes Monday.

Before the presentation of Oak Bay NDP candidate Jack McKenzie and Victoria NDP candidate Peter Bunn, a spokesman for an ice show in Vancouver spoke to club members for 12 to 15 minutes.

NOT BLINDED
"It's pretty difficult to explain your party's philosophy in 300 seconds," said Mr. Bunn. "So I'll content myself with saying that I see no reason why a free-enterpriser can't be a concerned, hard-working member of the NDP."

Mr. Bunn recalled he came to Canada from London in 1949 and carried bricks for 75 cents an hour.

He had built up a "good little business" since, but was not so blinded with dollar-blikers that he failed to realize the plight of the underprivileged in B.C.

Mr. Bunn said he was not so blind that he failed to see fault in a government which voted down an amendment against sending 12-year-old children to Brannan Lake, or which spent more than three years in getting the foundation prepared for Glendale School for the Retarded.

"Social Credit government is the government of the good life, but that didn't obscure the fact that the B.C. unemployment rate was three times that of Britain and four times that of Sweden."

No-Takeover Plan Proposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Liberal leader Dr. Pat McGeer Monday proposed a plan to reap the benefits of a provincial government takeover of the B.C. Telephone Co. without taking it over.

Dr. McGeer suggested that a federal tax concession to B.C. Tel be negotiated by the provincial government, coupled with a reduction in telephone rates fully reflecting the tax relaxation.

He made the suggestion on an open-line radio show when asked why the telephone company should not be taken over as the New Democratic Party has promised it will.

"Because it would cost a lot of money and cause a lot of trouble, that's why," Dr. McGeer said.

He said the only reason for taking over the company was to get a relaxation on income taxes and agreed it was unfair that other provincially-owned telephone companies paid no income tax.

"I am prepared to challenge Ottawa on this and negotiate an exemption for the B.C. Telephone Co.," he said.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved — actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important — this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Gulf introduces the Extended Payments Option

(an exclusive new plan that lets you stretch your payments on all Travel Card purchases).

Gulf is the first and only Canadian oil company to offer an Extended Payments Option — the most complete and helpful budget plan of all. E.P.O. lets you extend your payments up to a year (depending on the amount), not only on tires, batteries and repairs, but on all the other things you can charge with your Travel Card. Things like gas, oil, car rentals, meals and accommodation at Holiday Inns.

This new feature also saves you waiting around for separate time-payment calculations and invoices. And you don't have to make up your mind on the spot how or when you are going to make your payments. You can decide all that later, in the privacy of your own home, when you get your "all in one" monthly statement.

And here are 27 more good reasons it pays to carry a Gulf Travel Card.

A Gulf Travel Card is as good as cash, as safe as travellers cheques, as convenient as a chequing account, and as helpful as a budget account. Here are some of the things it will pay for:

Automotive products and services

(at more than 38,000 Gulf service stations across North America). 1,2. Gasoline and oil, 3,4,5. Lubrication, service and repairs, 6,7,8. Tires, batteries and accessories, 9. Car rentals (from any Tilden office in Canada or any Avis office in Canada or the U.S.A.).

Holiday Inns

(Gulf's Travel Card is good at more than 1,000 Holiday Inns in Canada, the U.S., Puerto Rico and The Bahamas — plus Wayfare Restaurants right across Canada). 10,11. Meals and accommodation.

Marine

12,13. Marine fuels and lubricants, 14,15,16. Accessories, service and repairs.

Aviation

17,18. Aviation fuel and lubricants, 19,20,21. Accessories, service and repairs.

Camping needs

22. Flashlight batteries, 23. Charcoal starter, 24. Camp stove fuel, 25. Insect repellent.

Special offers

26. Gulf Good Values (from participating Gulf stations), 27. Special merchandise offers (such as watches, luggage, cutlery, radios and tape recorders which Gulf offers exclusively to Travel Card holders at special prices).

How to get a Gulf Travel Card.

If you don't already have a Gulf Travel Card, just ask any Gulf dealer for an application. He'll see you get a reply fast. Because at Gulf, we hurry.

Trudeau Keeping Meet-People Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday in a statement he hopes to continue his policy of mingling with protest groups without any new security measures.

"I believe it is a risk worth taking, in order that public officials will not be isolated from the individual Canadian citizen, from the realities of his life, and his feeling toward his government," Mr. Trudeau said in a statement he telephoned to his Ottawa office from his overseas vacation retreat.

The prime minister was commenting on a complaint of common assault laid against him by a Niagara Falls, Ont., teenager following a Vancouver demonstration. Justice of the Peace Donald Stewart refused to allow a charge on the ground there was insufficient evidence that Trudeau struck 17-year-old Richard Jeanner during the demonstration.

Trudeau said he had withheld comment on the information laid against him until the justice of the peace made his finding.

MEET WITH ANY

As prime minister, he said, he has a responsibility to meet in public "with many of those who claim to have a grievance against our government or our society, to answer their questions, and to state my point of view."

For this to be profitable or even possible, certain conditions must be respected, Trudeau said.

"Obscene personal attacks or physical intimidation do not demonstrate the authority of the protesters or the validity of their protest.

"We know how much attention these activities receive on television and in the press. We must ask ourselves whether such groups can truly claim to represent the poor, or the oppressed of the world, or whether their objective does not become publicity for its own sake."

Trudeau said dissenters must be willing to evaluate counter-arguments. "Unruly mobs inevitably would make civil dialogue impossible."

"I have always resisted security measures which seem to me unnecessary or too elaborate."

"I hope it will be possible to continue this policy."

Top-Secret Plans Arrive by Mail

HAMBURG (AP)—The West German magazine Stern said Monday it received through the mail top secret American plans on nuclear, chemical and biological warfare in central and eastern Europe.

The magazine said the photostatic copy of the four-page plan, titled Market 10-1, and a 29-page supplement from the United States Army European headquarters in Heidelberg, West Germany, also were sent anonymously to newspapers in Italy, France and Britain.

Stern did not disclose the contents of Plan 10-1.

The magazine said an American military spokesman confirmed the documents were genuine and that about 20 persons had received the plan.

"The American Secret Service, CIA and military counter-espionage are now feverishly searching for a leaky spot or a high-ranking traitor in the Washington Pentagon or U.S. headquarters in Stuttgart, West Germany," the magazine said.

There was no immediate comment from U.S. Army headquarters in Heidelberg.

Interest Conflicts Probed

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has commissioned a study of possible conflict of interest which could confront senators, members of the cabinet and the Commons and others in the public service.

A spokesman in the prime minister's office said Monday that the study, commissioned some months ago, is being undertaken by Jeremy Williams, a professor at the University of Alberta who is under contract to the privy council.

His report is expected to take some time to complete. It then will be placed before the cabinet, the spokesman said.

New Democrat MPs shortly before the Commons started its summer adjournment raised the possibility of a conflict of interest in the naming of senators to a joint House-Senate committee on tax reform.

The New Democrats noted that several senators named to the committee hold a long string of directorships in private businesses and said this cast doubt on their impartiality in recommending tax law changes.

Wage Boost Major Issue

Postal Contracts Pondered

OTTAWA (CP) — Government and postal union representatives met Monday to bargain for a new contract amid warnings from postal workers that they do not plan to heed the government's call for wage restraint and will brook no manpower cuts.

William Houle, national president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said Monday's initial meeting would only establish a schedule for bargaining talks.

But, in an interview just before the talks opened, he said wage demands "will be a big issue," although the union intended to open with presentations on new working conditions and fringe benefits.

Houle said any attempt by government to cut the manpower of the post office would not even be considered by the union.

Such a reduction "cannot apply to the post office because we have to deliver the mail and the volume is increasing."

Contracts for the postal workers and letter carriers expire Sept. 30. They were signed in 1968 after a strike.

The unions have not made public any specific wage demands. But it is understood they are seeking a substantial wage increase, a shorter work week, improvements in night shift differentials and job protection against the advent of automated procedures.

OTTAWA (CP) — Public service associations are being consulted in steps being taken to curtail government spending, treasury board announced Monday.

The board, which bargains with public service groups negotiating new contracts, said a special meeting was held Aug. 19 with the national joint council of the Public Service of Canada. A draft policy document would be presented to another meeting with the national council to be held Tuesday.

Prime Minister Trudeau recently announced that 25,000 jobs would be cut from the public service in a government drive to put limits on spending as an anti-inflation move.

Murders Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — The Dominion Bureau of Statistics Monday reported 314 murders in Canada last year, compared to 281 in 1967, with the rate of murders per 1,000 population rising to 1.8 from 1.6 in the same period. Both figures, 314 and 1.8, are records.

The board, which bargains with public service groups negotiating new contracts, said a special meeting was held Aug. 19 with the national joint council of the Public Service of Canada. A draft policy document would be presented to another meeting with the national council to be held Tuesday.

life will go on . . .

To some people, it's just an "X" on a ballot.

Life will go on. No matter which government we have in Victoria.

These people will still have the same beefs. The same vague notion that one government is as bad as another.

This message is not for them.

But some British Columbians are worried about the priorities in our life. These people don't care that the pundits say than an NDP bandwagon is forming. People who worry about priorities don't ride on bandwagons. And after all, the pundits elected Thomas E. Dewey President of the United States.

These people are the people for whom the marking of a ballot is a serious exercise in civic responsibility. And it is a responsibility not to be undertaken lightly.

These are the people who pause before they mark their "X".

These are the people to whom this message is directed.

Politicians can promise almost anything. After all, they spend our money.

But there is only so much money. If a provincial government had $100,000 to spend each year on each citizen, there would still be priorities. How much to spend on health, how much on education, how much on housing, how much on pollution?

A responsible politician thinks — and talks — about priorities.

Some people think that British Columbia has its priorities wrong.

The NDP thinks so.

The NDP thinks that priority number one should be the rising cost-of-living. The NDP thinks that any provincial government which tried could do a great deal to halt the ever-rising spiral.

Most families feel the pinch worst in the cost of housing and the family food bill. Surely, a provincial government sitting on a $200 million surplus should be in the first mortgage business, making it possible for young people, and those not so young, to build their own homes with the aid of long-term low-interest mortgages. A provincial government with money in the bank should be using some of that money to build low-income housing. After all, by law, each dollar of provincial funds attracts three dollars of federal funds. That sounds like a good investment to the NDP.

It doesn't help the farmer much to tell him that the rest of us are paying more every week for the same grocery order. He sees very little of the increase.

A government which cared would have a Department of Consumer Affairs, and a tough minister in charge, to act in the interest of the consumer. We think that the food monopolies merit a long, hard look: because the NDP thinks that much of the blame lies there.

Of what use increasing wages, if only to chase spiraling costs? Of what value the good life, if rising prices deny to our elderly and our disadvantaged the slightest glimpse of that life?

The NDP thinks that education is the best investment a government can make. We are concerned with the quality of our education. We think, frankly, that still more money must be found for education. Not from the pocket of the small homeowner. But money must be found — because education ranks high on our list of priorities.

The NDP is concerned about the quality of our environment. We must not forget that we act as trustees for our children, their children — and all that come after. Of what use more automobiles and better homes if our air is not fit to breathe, nor our beaches fit to use?

So forget the gimmicks. Ignore the political promises.

On August 28th, life will go on in British Columbia.

What kind of life?

That's for you to decide . . .

Good!

Inco, Falconbridge: Strikers Hold Out

SUDBURY, Ont. (UPI) — Inco is now into its sixth week of a strike by Local 6500 of the United Steel Workers of America. The union called the strike at midnight July 10, after four months of labor-management negotiations failed to produce a new wage and fringe-benefits settlement.

Inco strikers were joined last Thursday by 3,200 employees of Sudbury's second nickel producer, Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd., this walkout occurred for almost identical reasons as the one at Inco—failure to reach agreement on a new contract.

Sudbury's major nickel concern is the International Nickel Co. which employs a total of 18,000 here and at its refining centre in Port Colborne in southern Ontario.

Meatcutters Approve Pact

VANCOUVER (CP)—The 800 meatcutters locked out of 103 Vancouver-area supermarkets for three months will return to work this week following ratification of a new contract which includes a 39-hour work week and pay raises of up to 75 cents an hour over two years.

The meatcutters, members of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union, voted 463 to 21 Sunday in favor of the contract which will give them a four-day week every eight weeks, but not the 36-hour, four-day week they asked for.

The union had asked for $1 an hour pay increase.

Stores affected by the lockout were those operated by Safeway, Super Valu, Shop-Easy, High-Low, Food Fair and Lodon.

Most of the stores had opened without meat departments after reaching a settlement with 3,000 clerks who had also been locked out.

City lawyer George Robson, representing the employers said some of the meatcutters may be back at work today and the remainder by Friday.

Under the new contract the actual work week will continue to be 40 hours and the extra hour worked will be cumulative until it reaches eight hours. Employees will then be given an extra day off with their regular days off.

Union secretary George Johnston Sunday hailed the 39-hour week as the first break-through of the 40-hour week for butchers in North America.

He said head meatcutters, their assistants and journeymen meatcutters will receive $16 a week retroactive to May 1 for a new rate of $168 weekly, and an additional $14 a week effective May 4, 1970.

Employees in other categories will receive $26 more weekly over the two-year period in stages of $14 and $12.

Vacations are extended under the new contract.

Meanwhile operations returned to normal at Vancouver International Airport Sunday after a court injunction granted Saturday halted picketing there by 100 striking oil workers.

Capital Spending Jumps

An increase in capital expenditures on new construction, machinery and equipment is expected over earlier estimates in all parts of Canada except the Atlantic provinces, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

The bureau earlier announced a mid-year survey of government corporation and institutional capital spending plans showed an increase to $17,356,000,000 from $17,046,000,000 reported to the bureau at the start of 1969. Total last year was $15,678,000,000.

A United Nations report says world trade last year was exceptionally good, with exports rising by 11.1 per cent to $28,700,000.

This trade expansion was achieved despite many political and economic disturbances, and 1968 was second only to 1964 for world trade this decade.

Coal production in Canada fell to 641,715 tons last month from 747,097 in July last year, says the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Imports rose to 2,184,228 from 1,253,196 in the same months.

A spurt in sales of industrial and transportation equipment and supplies led wholesale trade up 8.6 per cent to $1,566,644,000 in June from $1,442,232,000 a year earlier, says the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. These sales themselves were up 22.3 per cent in June, and 18 per cent higher in the half-year.

The International Air Transport Association reports that 2,375,000 revenue air passengers were carried on the North Atlantic route in the first half of this year, an increase of 12.9 per cent over the same period in 1968.

U.S. Steel Made to Stop Reciprocal Buying Deals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. justice department announced Monday final settlement of its antitrust suit prohibiting the United States Steel Corp. from entering into reciprocal purchasing arrangements with customers and suppliers for the next 10 years.

A final consent judgment was entered by the U.S. district court in Pittsburgh. Effective immediately, it concludes a civil suit filed last June 13.

SINCE 1955

The suit charged that U.S. Steel, America's largest steel-maker, had used its purchasing power since 1955 to promote sales in an attempt to monopolize the requirements of actual and potential suppliers of steel and steel products, cement, chemicals and other products.

The use of a company's economic power as a purchaser in an attempt to induce sales of its own products is a violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

The Pittsburgh-based company annually purchases about $2.5 billion worth of raw materials, supplies, equipment and services. In 1968, it had sales of $4.5 billion to rank as America's 10th largest industrial corporation.

The consent judgment does not constitute an admission by U.S. Steel of violating the law. But under it, the company agreed to many restrictions sought by the government.

Pompidou Pushes Austerity

PARIS (UPI)—President Georges Pompidou Monday speeded up preparation of a back-the-franc austerity program, calling in top government ministers concerned with pushing through the tough measures and heading off predicted worker unrest.

Pompidou wants the measures ready for a special Thursday cabinet meeting—the first meeting since devaluation of the franc was decided Aug. 8.

Prime Minister Jacques Chaban-Delmas met Labor Minister Joseph Fontanet, who was expected to confer again shortly with France's labor union leaders, angry to a man over devaluation of the franc which they regarded as reducing workers' purchasing power.

Hiram Walker's Crystal Gin.

The one made for good mixers.

Whether partying, or serving drinks, Canadians are good mixers. And we like to serve gin with good mixers, from tonic and ginger ale to fruit juices and vermouths.

So the gin right for good mixers must have the right amount of flavour, bouquet and dryness to stand up in some drinks and sit back in others.

Hiram Walker's Crystal is the gin made for good mixers. Like you and you. And you and you.

Another Jonah?

Truth Still at Sea

SAN PEDRO, Calif. (UPI)—Old sea hands argued Monday about the story of a Korean seaman who fell overboard in the Pacific and clung to the back of a giant turtle for 15 hours before being rescued by a passing vessel.

Some dismissed it as the whopper of all fish stories while others said it was no more preposterous than Jonah and the Whale.

The truth may possibly out next Friday when the Swedish motorship Citadel docks in Los Angeles harbor. Plans were laid to have an interpreter on hand for a first hand account from the unidentified Korean of his turtle ride.

Harold Murray, manager for the shipping agents for the Citadel here, was asked what he thought of the story—particularly the fact that the turtle during the 15 hours did not dive once—which would have meant certain death for the seaman.

"Well, as I understand it, if you sit on the back of a giant turtle, near the tail, you hold his head up out of the water and he cannot dive," Murphy said in a manner that defied analysis.

"I asked a sailor friend whether you might also use the turtle's tail as a sort of rudder but he seemed to think that was impractical."

When pinned down on whether he really believed the account, Murphy said: "There are a lot of loose ends. Maybe you should contact Jacques Cousteau (the famous French oceanographer)."

All information so far had come from Malmo, Sweden, on the basis of a radio message from the skipper of the Citadel, Capt. Horst Werder, to the owners, Per Liljergren of Landskrona.

According to Werder, the Korean fell off a Liberian vessel about 113 miles off the coast of Nicaragua. He saw a giant turtle and managed to climb on its back.

Werder said the Citadel was heading northwards in the Pacific when a lookout sighted a man's head bobbing in the ocean. The skipper said they managed to get him aboard. The Korean fell unconscious on the deck but soon revived and told his story.

Whether he told it in Korean, Liberian, Swedish or English was unclear.

"Good Grief ... Mom put in another Classified Ad!"

"You'd think the last time would have been enough. What an experience! People came and took away my bassinette. (So, it was a little small.) They took the sterilizer. They even took all the furniture that used to be in the spare room. Dad? Oh, he was a BIG help. He thought Mom was so smart he even kissed her, for heaven's sake!"

"Yep ... She did it! There goes the phone again!"

"Maybe if I could get those folks at VICTORIA'S DAILY NEWS-PAPERS to stop making it so easy to place an ad it would help. You see, all Mom did was make a list of that good stuff we really weren't using anymore. Then she dialed 386-2121 and told somebody called, 'that nice Ad Visor' about it ... Well, you know the rest. I heard her tell Dad that it costs so little to run an ad ... three-day rate ... six-day rate ... Whatever that means."

"Of course, I'll have to say this. My new bed is pretty nice ..."

"So, I suppose I shouldn't complain. You know, now that I think of it, seems like everybody around her is happier since Mom started using the Classified Ads in the local newspapers ... 'Cept me, that is. Frankly, I wish she'd hurry up with my dinner!"

Chess Title Tiebreaker Planned for Vancouver

MONTREAL (Staff)—The Pacific Northwest's chess fraternity has plenty to cheer about following the Canadian chess championships.

Not only did Vancouver international master Duncan Suttles, 23, capture a share of the championship with Zvonko Vranesic, 30, of Toronto, but Ricky Ganong, 22, of Yachats, Ore., won the honors in the reserve section.

Mr. Suttles made a tremendous comeback and scored 9½ points in the last 10 rounds to temporarily share the title with Mr. Vranesic, both scoring 13½. However, the tie will be broken in a four-game match between the two, scheduled for Vancouver early in December. The winner will not only carry the title, but will earn a trip to world championship playoffs in Spain next year. Mr. Suttles, who could only score 3½ points in the first seven rounds, is heavily favored.

Mr. Ganong, a math student at McGill University in Montreal, got off to a tremendous start with a 5-0 score, then coasted to a 5½-1½ reserve championship, giving him a berth in the next Canadian Closed championship section three years hence.

Mr. Suttles, practically out of it after his atrocious start and losses to Vancouver's junior ace Peter Biyiasas, 18, and former Canadian junior champion Lawrence Day, 20, of Ottawa, showed tremendous desire in capturing a share of the title.

Not only did he score a practically impossible 9½ points in his last 10 matches, but he won positions which others might have drawn or lost — notably against Victoria's Ray Kerr and Montreal's Leslie Witt.

Thus Vranesic, who also had a tremendous 8-2 finish, had to be content with sharing the title and faces an unenviable task in the Vancouver match.

Other Northwest representatives from Vancouver and B.C. disappointed, particularly Mr. Biyiasas, who led the field with a 3½-½ score after four rounds.

He finished in a tie for ninth and tenth with Montreal junior Camille Coudari, 18, scoring 8½-6½.

Sidney Man Jailed On Driving Charges

A 36-year-old Sidney man was sentenced Monday to nine months in prison after pleading guilty in Victoria Provincial Court to charges of impaired driving and driving while under suspension.

Elmer Henry told court he had four children and a wife to support, but Judge William Ostler said that was one more reason why he shouldn't drink at all.

"I can't understand a man like you. You have three previous convictions for impaired driving, and you still insist on driving a car," he said.

"I feel sorry for your family, but there is nothing I can do but send you to jail."

Secret Policar

MOSCOW (UPI)—The interior ministry announced it is selling burglar alarms for private apartments. The alarm called Reliable Guard is small enough to fit into the palm of a hand and cost $10 to $14 for installation with rental of about $5 and up depending on value of items in the apartment.

A 25-year-old Port Alberni man was sentenced to 42 days in prison after pleading guilty to charges of impaired driving and driving while his licence was suspended.

Joseph W. Charles had two previous convictions for impaired driving.

Judge Ostler said it was outrageous to see men like the accused driving cars in an intoxicated condition while accidents were steadily increasing.

Barry M. Davies, 23, of 719 Selkirk, was fined $400 after he pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

Koeth E. Rains, of Rutland, was fined $300 after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

Cecil J. Wallace, 55, of no fixed address, was sentenced to 20 days in jail after he pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy.

Court was told the accused had been convicted of the same offence three times this year.

Notary Public Evades Income Tax

A 62-year-old Victoria man has been charged with defrauding the federal and provincial governments of approximately $10,000 by making false statements in his income tax return.

Frank L. Kitto of 524 Selkirk appeared Monday in Victoria Provincial Court and was remanded until Sept. 5 for sentence, after pleading guilty to four charges of tax evasion.

Court was told Kitto, a notary public, failed to declare $35,293.61 in income received by him between April, 1965, and April, 1967.

SEVERAL WAYS

Victoria lawyer R. B. Hutchison, acting on behalf of the national revenue department, told court the accused employed a number of means to evade payment of income tax on approximately 58 per cent of his total earnings.

"More than $15,000 worth of receipts were omitted, and personal expenses for clothing and living accommodation were deducted," Mr. Hutchison said. Court was also told Kitto, a former municipal clerk in Port Alberni, claimed the acquisition costs of mortgages and agreements as business expenses. Income received from interest on mortgages was totally omitted.

TAX INVESTIGATOR

"All told, the accused reported 42 per cent of his income and omitted 58 per cent," Douglas J. R. Park, income tax investigator, told court.

In view of Kitto's age, the department of revenue had refrained from asking for a jail sentence, Mr. Hutchison said.

"The Crown is asking for a fine of $10,000—$2,500 for each charge," he said.

The main point in asking for the maximum fine of $10,000, he said, was to deter others from similar offences.

Not only was this sort of offence costly in lost revenue, but a great deal of time and money was spent to investigate a case and track down all the witnesses.

"More than 1,800 hours have been spent in the investigation of this particular case," court was told.

Judge William Ostler agreed with Mr. Hutchison the offence was serious and it was necessary to avoid such fraudulent activities, but he said he considered the Crown's recommendation for a $10,000 fine lenient.

"The maximum is $10,000 for each charge ($40,000), and I'm not sure at this point if I will accept the Crown's recommendation," he said.

"I think it's somewhat on the low side. I would like to get a pre-sentence report on this man."

George Jones, defence counsel, told court no discrepancies had been found in Kitto's handling of his clients' accounts. Fraudulent activities had been confined to tax evasion.

"I intend to call character witnesses and speak at length to sentence, your honor," he said.

Safe Confounds Wall Breakers

RENFREW, Ont. (CP)—Burglars pushed through eight layers of brick to reach a company safe, but the payoff eluded them. Police said the culprits got into the outer vault at the Ottawa Valley Grain Co., in this town about 60 miles west of Ottawa, but couldn't crack the combination to a small safe inside which contained more than $300.

Anglicans Back 'Living Wage' For the Clergy

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — The Anglican Church of Canada Monday approved the principle of paying its parish ministers salaries comparable to other service professions.

Rt. Rev. G. N. Luxton, Bishop of Huron, told the church's general synod increases are needed to enable clergy to live out of debt and give their families the accepted amenities of life.

The resolution, which was amended to omit specific mention of parity with social workers or high school teachers, was one of a series of changes in personnel policy.

The synod also voted:
● To ask a study group to establish a national personnel office.

● To redefine the positions of bishop, dean, archdeacon and rural dean or replace them with new positions for better guidance and support of ministers.

● To make remuneration for clergy commensurate with the needs of the personnel of the church and comparable to other serving professions which through their professional associations or otherwise have established standards of remuneration.

● To study through the national personnel office the problems of men who leave the ministry and help them adjust to some other employment.

The study group was headed by Most Rev. Howard H. Clark, primate of the Anglican Church of Canada.

Bishop Luxton said:
"The minimum stipend today is inadequate for the needs of the clergy and a stumbling-block to recruitment. In my day the young ordinand was unencumbered. Today he has a wife and two children."

In an interview later, the primate said the average minimum stipend is about $4,000 a year and would work out to about $5,500 with the usual addition of a house and utilities.

Dying Wind In Oliver Ends Threat

OLIVER, B.C. (CP) — Near-gale-force winds died down Monday, allowing firefighters to contain a forest fire which threatened this south Okanagan community, downed power lines and burned 4,000 acres of grass and timber.

The fire, which started in a garbage dump Sunday, came within 200 yards of this town of 1,800, causing some residents to evacuate their homes. All returned a few hours later.

A forest service spokesman said Monday the fire had been contained by 100 men and nine bulldozers, although there was still "a heavy smoke problem."

A spokesman for the Oliver fire department said that, although the fire was stopped near the town, it was impossible to know the situation in the woods due to heavy smoke.

At its height, the fire destroyed the two-bedroom ranch home of Edna Hugo, three miles west of here, as well as a shack at the geology field camp operated by the University of British Columbia.

The fire also destroyed 30 power poles cutting power to Keremeos, Hedley and Princeton.

Douglas McMynn, General manager of West Kootenay Power and Light Co. Ltd., said he expected temporary generators to restore power to these areas late Monday but said permanent repairs would take three to four days.

WATER BOMBERS

Another fire broke out on Sunday near Summerland about 10 miles north of Penticton and, fanned by 50-mile-an-hour winds, spread to 300 acres before being contained by eight water bombers and about 100 men.

Among the 91 forest fires burning in the province were:

● A 40-acre blaze now under control in the Prince George fire district.

● Two fires near Kaslo in southeastern B.C., one an 800-acre blaze and another 100-acres. Both were burning unchecked, forest service spokesmen said.

● A 400-acre fire at Christina Lake near Nelson in South Central B.C. was fought Monday by 125 men and six bulldozers but continued out of control.

Fires Ruin Alberta Buildings

CALGARY (CP) — A fire that burned out of control for more than six hours Saturday night destroyed a warehouse and office building in downtown Calgary, causing damage estimated at more than $100,000. No one was injured.

In Empress, Alta., forty volunteer firemen fought all night Sunday to control a fire which destroyed the 40-year-old Empress Hotel here. About half a dozen guests were evacuated without incident shortly after the fire broke out. No one was injured.

Camille Count Varies

Helicopter Hunt Locates Families

From AP

Low-flying helicopter crews hunted for more stranded storm victims in Mississippi's back country Monday, while signs of order emerged in Gulf Coast cities and towns shattered by Hurricane Camille eight days before.

The search for the dead went on. An aide to Mississippi Governor John Bell Williams said 107 bodies had been identified but further death toll estimates would be delayed because of difficulty in confirming the numbers.

The latest state estimate about 200 — came from Williams, who last week increased his figure to 300-plus. Hours later he backtracked, saying he had received contradictory and confused reports.

Military helicopters flew low-level search and rescue missions Monday in outlying areas north of the coast where several families were discovered isolated during the weekend.

Some 130 refugees were found about 10 miles south of Poplarville, Miss., and helicopters dropped a three-day supply of food and other essentials. Another isolated family of 12 was located near Wiggins and supplies were dropped for them.

Air searchers also were looking for bodies.

PREDICTION FAULT

In San Clemente, Calif., Vice President Spiro Agnew recommended by President Nixon that something be done to improve churling of the power and paths of hurricanes. Agnew toured the coastal disaster area last week.

In Louisiana's Bayou country, where Camille left 10 dead and 30 missing, residents returned to survey the almost total destruction. Many said they would never return.

"There's nothing in the houses you can salvage," said Mrs. Gary Thurmond, a trailer dweller who moved to the area from Panama City, Fla., two days before Camille.

AID ARRIVING

"All of the walls are down, even inside the houses that are still standing," she said. "You can't even tell what your furniture and everything is now."

Financial aid continued to pour into Mississippi. A state-wide telethon Sunday raised an estimated $1,300,000, including a pledge of $1,000 from the family of President Nixon and the White House staff, and a donation from the business community of St. Petersburg, Fla.

Virginia

Funeral Homes Busy

LOVINGSTON, Va. (UPI) — Funeral homes in this flooded agricultural community worked around the clock again Monday to bury three victims from last week's rain-lashed mountain slides.

The official death toll stood at 75 Monday with another 101 injured and 111 missing. Damage was estimated at $132,400,000. At least 143 bridges of all sizes were torn up by the rampaging James River and its tributaries, swollen by rains from dying Hurricane Camille.

Up in Nelson County, more than 100 miles northwest of the capital, funeral homes worked overtime burying the 51 identified dead. The unidentified were being kept until somebody could say for sure who they were.

Riviera Threat Eased

Storm Halts Fires In Dry California

From AP, Reuters

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — Helped by a tropical storm 1,000 miles away, firefighters have stopped the spread of three brush fires that crackled over 42,700 acres and forced an estimated 650 persons from their homes.

The fires began Friday a few miles apart in northern San Diego County about 80 miles south of Los Angeles. Up to 1,800 weary firefighters confronted gusty winds, 100-degree heat and 10-per-cent humidity in the parched, brown hills as the blazes swept out of control.

Then a large tropical storm off Mexico pushed moist air into Southern California, driving the humidity up and the temperature down. There was even a little rain to augment the tons of water and chemical retardants dumped by droning air tankers.

Meanwhile, forest fires which seriously threatened posh resort towns along the French Riviera were reported either extinguished or under control.

At one point the town of Cannes appeared about to be engulfed by fires. Flames were halted on the edge of town.

Almost 100,000 acres of pine woods, vineyards and gardens were destroyed in the fires and officials estimated it would take up to 20 years to repair damage.

Take a cold, hard, impartial look at the socialistic record!

What happened in Saskatchewan under the CCF (now NDP) socialist government? What is happening today in Britain under the Labour socialist government? Briefly and undeniably, economic chaos, over-taxation, the steady loss of employment opportunities for talented young people, and the uprooting of families forced to go elsewhere to find employment.

CONTRAST THIS WITH BRITISH COLUMBIA TODAY

- 1 Wage earners in British Columbia receive the highest average weekly wage in Canada.
- 2 Wage earners and homeowners in B.C. pay lower taxes than wage earners and homeowners in any other part of Canada.
- 3 The Cost of Living in Vancouver has risen less since 1961 than the cost of living in any other major city in Canada.
- 4 Five of the ten healthiest Canadian cities in per capita income ratings are in British Columbia.
- 5 There are more young people per capita in high schools, universities and vocational schools than in any other province in Canada.
- 6 New industry is creating a wider choice of better job opportunities in B.C.

Would Socialism really endanger B.C. families? Many people who in the past voted Conservative, Liberal and even NDP are convinced that it would. Their conviction is based on facts and experience.

That is why they will make sure this province keeps moving ahead — by voting for Premier Bennett and his Government on August 27.

Quart Jumps Again

Milk Reaches 36-Cent Mark

Milk prices at a Victoria dairy will go up two cents a quart Friday, the second two-cent jump in less than a year. The new price of 36 cents a quart is an increase of five cents, or 16 per cent, in the past two years.

There was no announcement from other dairies.

Northwestern Creamery distributed a letter to customers Monday that said, "Cost of milk from the farmer, added labor costs, and the general increase in all other costs has finally forced us to increase dairy product prices. We have been able to limit the increase to two cents, effective Friday, August 29th, 1969."

SAME HIKE

The last increase, also a two-cent hike, was last September. There was a one-cent increase in November, 1967.

A spokesman for the Vancouver Island Dairywomen's Association said he was unaware of any recent milk price increases to the farmer.

Mrs. Edgar Smith of the Consumers' Association said, "It's unfortunate that an essential food, that children depend on, has to go up . . . It wasn't discussed with us, and I think it should have been."

The Colonist was unable Monday night to reach any spokesman for any of the major dairies in Victoria.

New Highrise Approved For Quadra

Chairman of the community development committee of city council, Ald. Ian Stewart said Monday that approval had been given for a $3,600,000 mortgage loan to build a 17-storey, high-rise apartment building at the corner of View and Quadra.

The highrise will be started this year by West Park Developments, Vancouver. There will be 275 suites, some bachelor and some one-bedroom, at rentals from $101 to $125 a month.

The ground floor will be used for commercial development.

The $3,600,000 mortgage comes under the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation plan which permits federal loans for low-rental developments and holds the owners of buildings to a 5-per-cent per year return on their original investment.

Sewer Rule Hits Schools

By BILL STAVDAL

Saanich school board is seeking a Thursday meeting with the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health to discuss new sewage regulations which affect the development of the whole school district.

The school board received word Monday from health board director Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread that he will not approve any more temporary sewage holding tanks.

Dr. Whitbread also said that he is recommending to municipal councils that they withhold buildings permits for school projects where there is no "suitable" sewage disposal system.

TWO ON SEWER

The peninsula has 18 schools, only two of them on sewer lines.

Bryan Shaw, school district building superintendent, told trustees that the future of the board's construction program is affected by Dr. Whitbread's ruling.

After hearing details of the health board's requirements at three meetings, trustees criticized the health authority for allegedly moving health and into engineering.

TRUCK PLAN

At Deep Cove and Brentwood elementary schools the school board last spring was refused permission to increase its septic tank and drain field system. It was given permission to build holding tanks which will be pumped out periodically.

Trucks will transfer the sewage to sewer pipes in Greater Victoria.

A similar arrangement has been approved for an expansion project at Saanichton elementary school.

Mr. Shaw told the board that the effect of the health board's ruling will be to halt enlargement of schools in growing areas. Children will have to be taken by bus to less crowded schools, he said.

At the three schools where sewage will be pumped and trucked, the health board has refused to allow the septic tank to be pumped out.

The health board is insisting that a second tank be installed, which would receive effluent from the septic tank.

SIX-FOOT FENCE

A six-foot-high fence must be built around the site of the buried tanks, he said.

Asked why, Mr. Shaw said no reasons had been given.

In the case of Saanichton elementary school the health board has required relocation of a sewage pump at added cost to the school district, said consulting engineer Ted Maranda of Vancouver.

Mr. Shaw declared:

"The point at issue here is the right of the health board to require certain engineering specifications."

Court May Have Final Word For Joggers, Dogs

A conflict between joggers and dog owners in Esquimalt was discussed Monday night by the municipal council, which decided the joggers will have the last word in court.

Council considered a series of correspondence from Harold Hemus and the SPCA and concluded that joggers pursued through the municipality's streets by dogs would have to support their complaints by testifying in court when the SPCA lays charges against the dog owners.

Mr. Hemus had written to council complaining that he was forced to carry a club to protect himself from dogs at large.

The letter was referred to D. H. Beeching, secretary-manager of the SPCA, for a report. Mr. Beeching wrote to 30 dog owners in the area asking them to keep their dogs controlled.

Evening patrols tried by the SPCA had resulted in labor problems and weren't successful, Mr. Beeching said. He suggested complainants should be willing to go to court when the SPCA laid the necessary charges.

"No one can complain that he has not been fairly and adequately warned; if dog owners continue to turn their dogs loose on the streets they must accept the penalty for their actions," his letter concluded.

Ald. J. W. Bell said that he is a dog owner and didn't like the "tenor" of Mr. Hemus's letter or Mr. Beeching's letter. He said his dog "goes after prowlers" and has done so on many occasions.

He compared a jogger being chased by four or five dogs with the saying that a dog never chases a cat until it runs. Although Mr. Hemus has the right to go jogging, "if it was me, I would find a different route."

Council decided to send a copy of Mr. Beeching's letter to Mr. Hemus and explain that he would have to testify against the dog owners to gain satisfaction.

Saanich-Islands Finale

Candidates Face Noisy Audience

By NANCY BROWN

A shattered water glass bore mute testimony to an unruly election meeting with plenty of audience participation as Saanich-Islands candidates got in their last licks at Sidney Monday night.

More than 200 people crowded into the dining room and stood in the lobbies at the Sidney Hotel to hear the candidates, although their shouts and remarks frequently drowned out the speakers' voices.

At one point chairman John Salvador, gaveling for order, hammered a water glass. He broke the glass and for a minute succeeded in quieting the audience.

MAIN ISSUES

Questions about a Hansard, Commonwealth Trust and the progress of the Pat Bay highway seemed uppermost in the minds of the audience during the short question period which followed the speeches.

Secord Incumbent John Tisdale dwelt upon his fear of union domination of the NDP if it formed the government.

He said that during the committee stage of the debate on legislation covering open pit mining, there was an NDP filibuster in the House until a letter was received from the United Steelworkers of America which gave approval to the legislation.

'IN NO TIME'

"As soon as that happened, opposition withered completely and the bill went through three readings in no time at all," he said.

"That proves that international trade unions could affect the cabinet and the NDP," he said.

"The NDP fears international finance affecting industry. I fear international trade union bosses."

HIGHWAY TOPIC

Liberal candidate Louis Lindholm attacked Secord action on the Pat Bay highway, which he said was 16 miles of the most highly travelled road in B.C.

He contrasted the highway, which he said had the second highest traffic count in B.C. with 60 miles of paved three-lane highway between Williams Lake and Barkerville, a seasonal tourist town.

He advocated a two highway system, one a ferry freeway and the other to carry local traffic.

He hit at provincial government throw-aways of dollars into the Rose-Blanshard thoroughfare, which he said was intended to link up with the highway, but later was doomed after a $1,000,000 expenditure to trail off into nowhere.

Don Johannessen said that in order to attract secondary industries trained workers should be available.

A technical school should be built to provide the training, and in answer to a heckler added that the vocational school under construction will not provide trained people.

Almost drowned out by hecklers and shouting to make himself heard, Mr. Johannessen asked for free prescription drugs for the elderly, and for free chronic care hospitals.

"Old people are losing their homes and their life savings just because they are sick and have to pay their own hospitalization," he said. "It's not right."

Crash Injuries Cited in Death

Retired businessman Silas Cox, 76, of 880 Jasmine Avenue, died of a fractured spinal cord and a ruptured heart, a coroner's jury was told Monday night.

After medical evidence was heard, Coroner Edmond Jorje de St. Jorre adjourned the inquest until 7:30 p.m. Sept. 3 in the Law Courts.

Mr. Cox was fatally injured by a car at Kings and Douglas, Thursday afternoon.

Born in Buxton, England, Mr. Cox had lived in Victoria for 15 years. He was a member of Britannia Branch No. 7, of the Royal Canadian Legion.

He is survived by his wife Eveline; sons Raymond, of Houston, Texas and Jack, of Toronto, Ont.; daughter Mrs. C. (Barbara) Caldwell, of Toronto, Ont.; and four grandchildren.

Funeral services will be at 10:30 a.m. today at Sands Mortuary on Quadra.

Boy Struck, Killed; Injured Man Dies

An eight-year-old boy was killed Sunday when he ran in front of a car on Gorge Road. Another boy who was following him escaped injury.

Daniel Eric Cox, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Cox 34 240 Burnside East, was thrown 97 feet from the point of impact with a car driven by Julian Andrew Forrester, of 3887 Braefoot police said.

The boy was trying to cross Gorge Road near Carroll. It is not known whether an inquest will be held.

SECOND DEATH

He was Victoria's 11th traffic fatality this year — and the death in hospital Sunday of Dr. R. M. Torrie, injured Aug. 18, brought the total dead to 12.

Dr. Torrie, of 2793 Somass Drive, was injured last Monday when his car collided with a front-end loader outside the Oak Bay Municipal Hall. An inquest date has not been set.

Dr. Torrie, 45, had been a resident of Victoria for 18 years and was a past president of the Greater Victoria Dental Association. His funeral will be at 1:15 p.m. Thursday at McCall Bros. Chapel.

THREE SONS

He is survived by his wife Alynne, three sons, Bruce, Douglas and Tommy; a brother, Lt. Cmdr. Bruce Torrie, of Ottawa; and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Torrie of 1270 Beach Drive.

Meanwhile two-year-old Sandra Beban of 701 Esquimalt Road was still in "very serious condition" Monday in St. Joseph's Hospital as a result of head injuries she received in an accident Thursday.

The girl was in a stroller being pushed across Esquimalt Road by her grandmother when she was struck by a car.

'If Gaglardi Gets Job'

Ombudsman for Ombudsman?

If P. A. Gaglardi becomes the ombudsman for the poor and handicapped in B.C., as Premier Bennett has promised, "we're going to need an ombudsman for the ombudsman," NDP leader Tom Berger said in Victoria Sunday night.

He told a packed election rally that an NDP government would introduce a proper Bill of Rights, a comprehensive system of legal aid, and a full-fledged ombudsman to protect the rights of all citizens in the province.

Former NDP leader Robert Strachan told the meeting that if Mr. Gaglardi did get the job the premier promised, the first person to come knocking on his door would probably be Prince George contractor and brewer Ben Ginter.

"The first thing Ben Ginter will probably want to know is what happened to the $1,000,000 he claims the highways department gyped him out of, and why the government wouldn't allow him to reduce the price of beer by 10 cents."

'Keep Union Dues in Canada'

City Going Grit—McGeer

By CLEMENT CHAPPEL

Liberal leader Patrick McGeer revisited Victoria Sunday and added Saanich and the Islands and both Victoria seats to his vision of a Liberal B.C. government after Wednesday's general election.

Dr. McGeer told a crowd of more than 750 gathered in Central Park for a salmon barbecue that in the last few days Greater Victorians had "found the courage" to vote Liberal.

Keeping a promise he made here last week on his first visit of the campaign, the Liberal leader predicted that Victoria and Saanich and the Islands candidates Mel Couveller, Ian Stewart and Louis Lindholm would win seats from the Social Credit party. Esquimalt, also Social-credit, where Liberal Fred Phillips is running, "is going to be a close one," Dr. McGeer speculated.

LITTLE NEW
Winding up his away-from-home campaign this home rising is Vancouver Point Grey's the Liberal leader broke little new policy ground except to say that a Liberal government would attempt to keep union dues paid in Canada from going abroad.

While two long queues of people flanked the speaker's platform, waiting for their shares of salmon, potato salad rolls and coffee, Dr. McGeer scoffed at the "arm chair critics" who said it couldn't be done.

"We're going to win this election," he shouted, drawing cheers from people in front of of him, many of whom were regular party workers. Dr. McGeer called the gathering "enormous and enthusiastic."

BIG CROWD—Party organizers said the crowd numbered well above 1,000 while other observers estimated it at between 750 and 1,000.

Dr. McGeer said that the "people of B.C. aren't gripped by fear" and that "in the last few days they've found their courage in Victoria."

Recalling American President Franklin D. Roosevelt's phrase, Dr. McGeer said "there is nothing to fear but fear itself."

"Nowhere in B.C. is the contest between the Liberal and Social Credit candidates more obvious than right here in Victoria," the Liberal leader said. He said the Liberals had "young and vigorous candidates" and a "dynamic program."

"We know the people 'don't want a government obligated to big business. We know they don't want a government obligated to big labor,'" he said.

UNION DUES

"We're going to be able to do something to keep union dues in Canada," Dr. McGeer said.

"Hogwash—you can't do it," was the reply from a man in the audience. Dr. McGeer continued on the theme of labor domination of parties and some one shouted: "What did you kick the seamen's union out for?"

Dr. McGeer still continued saying the Liberals were the only party in B.C. "that has never been a captive" of labor given B.C.—"and I make no comment about that record."

He referred several times to his own and others' predictions of the outcome of Wednesday's election.

ISLAND WASTELAND
"Skeptics have called (Vancouver Island) a Liberal wasteland... and all I can say is give me more of those wastelands."

Dr. McGeer visited Greater Victoria last Tuesday and Wednesday and left saying that a good effort by party workers could win for the Liberals the double-seat riding of Victoria and the single seat of Saanich and the Islands. He said at the time that he would be back to make a final prediction before the election.

SOCRED FORTS
Both Victoria seats and the Saanich and the Islands have been held by large margins by Social Credit and so has Esquimalt. Liberal Allan Cox is the incumbent in Oak Bay.

NDP leader Tom Berger was also in Victoria Sunday evening for a final attempt to gain support in the area.

Dr. McGeer referred twice to the Colonist, drawing laughter by calling it "that leftist newspaper."

If the Colonist is calling some races in the election close, Dr. McGeer said, "then I can hardly keep from saying it's going to be easy."

"No matter how much service Premier Bennett has

Gloves Removed by NDP In Victoria Area Drive

By IAN STREET

The gloves came off here Sunday night as NDP leader Tom Berger kicked off his party's stretch drive with a prediction that Wednesday's voting will give him a majority of seats in the legislature.

Addressing an overflow crowd of nearly 900 in the Oak Bay junior high school auditorium, Mr. Berger accused Premier Bennett of waging a campaign of fear and charged "the whole question of integrity in government is really the fundamental issue."

He told a predominantly friendly crowd that the Commonwealth Trust fiasco was an example of the patronage that permeated the Social Credit government and had aroused the voters in this election.

BLIND EYE

He said Mr. Bennett attended ceremonies marking the incorporation of Commonwealth Trust in 1961 at the invitation of former trust company president A. G. Duncan Crux. Within two years, the NDP leader added, civil servants reported violations of the Trust Companies Act by Commonwealth, but the finance minister took no action.

"The civil servants did their duty year after year, but Mr. Bennett, as finance minister the one responsible for enforcement of the Trust Companies Act, turned a blind eye. Nothing was done until 1968 when the lid blew off."

CONTINGENT

"Then Mr. Bennett said, 'My friends have got into trouble, I'd better lend them some money.' He lent them $3,000,000 of your money and mine. The NDP fought the government because we are unalterably opposed to lending taxpayers' money to people who break the law."

(The loan of up to $3,000,000 authorized by the legislature last spring is contingent upon the trust company raising at least $1,000,000 in new share capital.)

The NDP leader said Social Credit candidates should be asked in this election why the government was spending less on senior citizens' housing this year than it was willing to lend to Commonwealth Trust.

NO ANSWERS

"We haven't had any answers. But after Aug. 27, if we form an NDP government, we'll find out why. The present government is placing the interests of Commonwealth Trust before those of the senior citizens who helped build this province."

"We'll cancel that $3,000,000 loan and use the money to increase old age pensions."

Former NDP leader Robert Strachan, who chaired the meeting, set the aggressive tone for the speeches that followed when he attempted to link Social Credit with distribution of hate literature in Nanaimo over the weekend.

Mr. Strachan, seeking re-election in Cowichan-Malahat, said the premier's attacks on the NDP as "Marxian-socialists" and charges that the party is dominated by labor unions, showed how desperate Social Credit was in this election.

"This is evidence the government knows full well it has outlived its usefulness, that it has no program to present to the voters, and therefore it is a government that is scared of election day."

He noted a Vancouver newspaper columnist recently referred to the arrival in Vancouver of "one of the hate-mongers of Canada" and speculated whether the provincial election had brought him to B.C.

VIOLENT CRIMES

Mr. Strachan indicated he felt the visit was in some way connected with literature placed on the windshields of cars in Nanaimo "which accused the NDP... of the most violent crimes against humanity and related us to almost every oppressor from Genghis Khan to Adolf Hitler."

"I don't know who is responsible. But this is the kind of campaign we have had to face in the next two or three days we can expect almost anything to be said."

Later, in his introduction of the NDP leader Mr. Strachan raised another touchy subject.

'REALIZED'

"I have been casting around for reasons why Premier Bennett is so upset and lashing out so wildly in this campaign. I then realized why the premier had a psychopathic hatred for Tom Berger long before he was ever elected leader of this party."

Referring to the slander action brought against Mr. Bennett by former provincial purchasing commission chairman G. E. P. Jones, Mr. Strachan recalled that the man who succeeded him last April had acted as counsel for the plaintiff.

HAD TO ANSWER

"Tom Berger had the legal right to walk into Mr. Bennett's office and by some peculiar legal process known as examination for discovery... and because he wasn't in the legislature—the premier had to answer."

"Tom Berger took the case right to the Supreme Court of Canada and he won, and Mr. Bennett had to pay $15,000."

Dave Barrett, seeking re-election for the NDP in Coquitlam, told the rally that Gordon Dowding, the lawyer who is again NDP candidate in Burnaby-Edmonds, raised the "interesting question" that none of the money spent by government departments on advertising during the campaign had been authorized by the legislature.

"It will be interesting to see them scurrying around when we come into office and ask them to cough up the money to pay the bill," he said.

BRIDGMAN

In his 60-minute speech, Mr. Berger said an NDP government would establish a revolving housing fund using money from the province's $200,000,000 surplus fund. The money would be used to establish low-interest first mortgages to assist those who wanted to build or buy a home but couldn't afford one at present.

The NDP leader said his party would retain the present $5,000 second mortgages because we believe these mortgages are helping many people... and continue the home-owner grant because people have come to rely upon it.

WHY NOT TO VOTE NDP

Everyone reads newspapers, listens to radio and watches TV. Anywhere in the world democrats are all the same, in Canada, United States, England and Sweden. The democrats have ruled in Saskatchewan, where we now have high taxes and large debts—the United States is not in a good position. England, under the leadership of democrats, have twice been nearly bankrupt—would you like this in B.C. or Canada?

In Sweden as the NDP calls it "The land of the best living in the world," there is a government taking 40.9% out of the people's income to run the country. (Ref. U.S. news and world report.) Do you want this to happen here?

It is my personal opinion that the Liberals should prove themselves worthy of governing in Ottawa first before we give them a chance here in B.C.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Thank you for the column Child Abuse Is Everybody's Business. That column helped me feel less like a fool. Here's my story.

Several weeks ago I answered a knock at the door. Three teenage girls were standing on the porch, tears streaming down their faces. I couldn't tell whether they were laughing or crying. One girl sobbed out the story. A man in a car drove along the curb and seemed to be following them. They ignored him. Finally he pulled his car up and blocked their pathway as they tried to cross the street. When he opened the car door and tried to grab one of the girls, they saw he was naked from the waist down. The girls ran down the street and began pounding on doors. Two people would not let them in. I did.

Police Courteous

I gave them a pencil and paper and told them to write down as many details as they could remember. Then I called the police. The police came promptly. They were courteous and kind and drove the girls home.

Several friends criticized me severely for letting the girls in my home. They said I was taking a terrible chance. Maybe I was, but I don't see how a decent human can turn his back on kids in trouble. Was I wrong? Have things changed that much? Keeper Of My Brother's Children.

Dear Keeper: Of course you were taking a chance but it's a chance you had to take. Insensitivity to the suffering of others is symptomatic of a sick society. As card-carrying members of the human race we have an obligation to respond to the needs of others. This is what distinguishes us from animals.

Dear Ann Landers: From time to time you print letters from wives who complain about husbands who refuse to bathe, won't brush their teeth, and sleep in dirty underwear. You have pointed out that these men are sick and of course you are right.

Fetish of Cleanliness

What about women who have the problem in reverse? My mother made a fetish of cleanliness. Our home smelled like a hospital because mom used the strongest antiseptics on everything. She made us wash the mouthpiece on the telephone every time we finished talking. If anyone in the family had a cold he had to wear a surgical mask. As kids we were never allowed to give anyone a bite of anything, like an apple or a piece of candy. I'm trying to raise my children to be neat but not nuts. My husband says I am too lenient and that our girls are growing up to be very sloppy. Please comment — Midding Mother.

Dear Mother: Have you considered the possibility that you have been too permissive because of your own unfortunate childhood? On the outside chance that your husband has a legitimate complaint tighten up. Sloppy boys are bad enough, but a girl who is allowed to grow up with poor grooming habits is out in left field without a glove.

Name-Dropping in Ireland

Achill a Haunting, Lonely Island

Another in a series of articles on the author's recent trip to Ireland.

A morning's run from Mullary to Achill Island was like going into a different world. You could feel that this part of the land hasn't been invaded by tourists for too long. There is a haunting, almost lonely feeling in the air.

Here you see women with shawls over their heads cutting the turf while their little donkeys, equipped with baskets on their sides wait patiently to carry it home.

We had already seen many people cutting peat for their fires but somehow up here it looked far more picturesque, even though I swore I wouldn't use that word.

Along the route there was lots of blazing gold furze and misted purple heather. Before I forgot I'll tell you of a trick I learned up here of how to keep heather fresh.

You split the stems then force them deep into a potato. Put the potato studded with heather into a container with water. They told me that this way the heather would stay fresh for six months.

We left the mainland town of Achill to cross the bridge to the island and drove to the most western tip of Ireland. Stopping on a high cliff above Keem Bay we looked down to watch the opaline waters crash in foamy green breakers on the rocks below. Way, way out there was a light mist rolling in from the Atlantic.

Back down to a little village where Michael warned us not to ask to take a picture of anyone as the people are shy and don't like being "shot." But of course, someone did but the woman just gave them a shy smile, shook her head and turned to walk away.

We took a stroll along the beach where I picked up a small white rock to take home. It now sits in front of my treasured leprechaun given to me many years ago by Sandham Graves (a proud Irishman) when he was editor of the Colonist.

We retraced to Mullary where we took the Morisons on board again and started off on the day's run to Bundoran. As we left the town of Westport, rolling down a curvy hill everyone gasped, myself included. We were approaching a bridge that was so low you felt unless the bus stopped we would all be decapitated.

That bridge had an 11-foot, three-inch clearance and the bus was 11-feet, so you can imagine what it looked like. We came to the famous fishing resort Pontoon, on the HOLLYWOOD — Directed by the Vatican to roll back in four areas of their experimental life-style and service, the revolutionary immaculate Heart of Mary Sisters has advised Rose it will continue its present course.

The 388 sisters of the Hollywood-based order were told in June to make a final report on their experiment after their August meeting — particularly with regard to four points:

Sister Mary Mark Zeyen, a spokeswoman for the sisters, said:

"No one wants to know how effective we are, what we are doing about the poor, the true meaning of our renewal to the sisters — any of that."

High Commissioner for Jamaica, Vincent McFarlane, left, and Mrs. McFarlane made official call Monday at Government House to meet Lieuten-

An obstetrician once made the observation that male babies take longer to deliver. This bears out an old theory I have had: Even at birth, men are reluctant to ask directions anywhere.

I can always tell when my husband is lost. At a crossroad he will take out a coin and mumble, "Heads right; tails left." Or he will snap on the car radio and yell, "Hold it down until I see where this station is originating from."

"Are we lost?" I ask him. "Certainly not," he says. "Why do you ask?"

"Because we are in a field of timothy and a cow is nibbling away on the radio antenna."

"Give me the road map."

"Are you going to accuse me of moving the Mississippi River again?"

"Of course not... hah! Those fools obviously just let 143 dangle out here in a cornfield. If you can't trust AAA, I always say, who can you trust?"

"Here comes a farmer, why don't you ask directions?"

"Because I am not lost. All I do is go back to where that hound dog is sleeping in the road, pick up 17 and that will take us right back to the interstate."

"We've passed that hound dog so often now he thinks we're family."

"Look, don't you worry about driving the car. You just keep the baby quiet and dry, see to it little Charlie doesn't bleed all over the slipcovers, that Elsie doesn't get sick again, that the two boys don't fall out of the car fighting over who sits next to the window and entertain them with some kind of a fun game. In other words, sit back and enjoy yourself."

"We've been driving for hours. Why don't we stop and ask directions at a service station?"

"Because I am not lost!" "Why are you so stubborn? What would happen if you stopped and asked directions? Would your beard stop growing? Would your voice become high pitched? You don't need a wife and family with you. You need Lowell Thomas and a Boy Scout patrol."

"Will you stop acting like a fishwife and quiet those kids down? One has his wet nose on the back of my neck."

"That isn't a kid. It's a lost cow."

me there was a very fine statue of the countess in St. Stephen's Green in Dublin and that I should make a point of going there to see it so that I could tell the countess relative when I got back to Canada. "It isn't very far up Grafton Street," he almost pleaded.

I felt that unless I paid my respects to their national heroine I would be committing a crime against the Irish people in general and to Betty Stone in particular. So I walked to St. Stephen's Green one morning.

But that isn't all. Over one of the Dublin radio stations on the program when they broadcast a capsule of Irish history, I heard about a cousin of the countess, by the name of Kingsbury who went to Canada and settled on Salt Spring Island.

That little bit of name-throwing set off quite wide reverberations.

Prince Gives U.K. His Rent Money

LONDON (Reuters) — Prince Charles Monday offered Britain half his yearly income, and the government promptly accepted.

The treasury will get about £110,000 ($285,000) yearly from the income he will receive starting on his 21st birthday Nov. 14. His agreement follows a precedent set by his great-uncle, the Duke of Windsor, who gave the nation part of his income when he was Prince of Wales.

Charles will use the remaining £110,000 to pay for staff salaries and expenses connected with his official duties.

The income comes from rents in London and Southwest England where the prince owns property as Duke of Cornwall, one of his eight titles.

Among the money-making properties are a prison and a housing estate in South London. Until now all the revenue from the dukedom of Cornwall has gone to his mother to help her meet royal expenses. These revenues have totalled £2,500,000 ($6,500,000) since she started receiving them in 1952.

Buckingham Palace said the prince's agreement with the government is subject to review either upon his marriage or another important change in circumstances.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — A judge Monday took under advisement a move to dismiss a request by District Attorney Edmund Dine of New Bedford, Mass., for an autopsy on the body of Mary Jo Kopechne, 28, who was drowned in an accident involving Senator Edward Kennedy.

The judge's action probably means that Dine will not be able to present autopsy results at an inquest into the young woman's death that is scheduled for Sept. 3 in Edgartown, Mass. It appeared that all legal formalities could not be completed by Sept. 3.

NEEDS 48 HOURS

Miss Kopechne was drowned last month when a car driven by Senator Kennedy plunged off a narrow bridge on Chappaquiddick Island on the Massachusetts. She is buried in Larksville, near Wilkes-Barre.

Judge Bernard Brominski of common pleas court said he will take at least 48 hours to rule on the motion by the girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kopechne of Berkeley Heights, N.J., who are opposed to an autopsy.

They claimed that Pennsylvania was without jurisdiction in the matter because "no crime has been committed in Pennsylvania."

Brominski also said no date will be set for a hearing on Dine's original petition until after he had ruled on the Kopechne motion.

UBC's Outlay $35,000,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — Books, equipment and services — including a $20,000 earthquake simulator—cost the University of British Columbia nearly $35,000,000 during the university's fiscal year that ended March 31, a financial statement said Monday.

UBC also spent $37,000,000 on wages and salaries for its administrative and academic staff and $4,200,000 for awards and grants to graduate and undergraduate students.

The major sources of income came from the provincial government, with $37,000,000; students fees, $10,000,000; sponsored and assisted research grants, $11,000,000; gifts, grants and bequests, $7,000,000, and the federal government, $2,700,000.

Included among the foreign equipment purchases was a $20,000 machine for simulating earthquakes by a civil engineering research group, a $43,000 electro-hydraulic loading system for civil engineering, a $11,000 bio-medical recorder used in dentistry and a number of spectrophotometers ranging in price from $1,100 to $32,000 each.

Bursar William White said the university has more than $16,000,000 of debts incurred for the construction of residences and other self-liquidating projects.

Mail Ship Ablaze

Vessel Abandoned 21 Seamen Missing

From Reuters, UPI

Twenty-one seamen were missing Monday several hours after abandoning the 1,400-ton Australian freighter Noongah in rough seas off the New South Wales coast.

As navy and merchant ships crisscrossed the sea about 330 miles north of Sydney in heavy rain which lowered visibility to 500 yards, only five of the 26-man crew of the Noongah were known to have been picked up from life rafts.

And a Bahamas mail ship caught fire 170 miles east of Miami Monday and all 50 passengers jumped overboard before the crew brought the blaze under control, the Coast Guard reported.

All of the passengers were hauled safely back aboard the ship, the Deborah K, when the crew squelched the fire which raged briefly out of control.

Coast Guard headquarters dispatched three planes but recalled two when word came the vessel was out of danger.

Royal Castle Out Airlines Warned

LONDON (UPI) — Two American Airlines were under a warning today: quit flying directly over Queen Elizabeth's official home.

The royal borough of Windsor said Trans World Airlines and Pan American World Airways have been giving their passengers unauthorized air views of Windsor Castle as they leave England heading toward the United States.

If the airliners were flying the correct course, the council said, passengers would see gravel pits, woodlands and fields.

The council said it was not opposed to overflights simply because Windsor Castle is the Queen's official home. "This is an area of dense housing that should be avoided," a spokesman said.

A spokesman for Pan-Am said "It is gratifying to note that even at Windsor heights our distinctive aircraft are easily identifiable."

Draft Pawn Out of Jail

SAN FRANCISCO (Reuters)

A federal judge Monday freed an 18-year-old California youth recently imprisoned for up to four years for obeying his mother's orders not to register for the military draft.

The release of Erik Whitehorn followed an unexpected turnabout in the case one of the most widely watched legal tilts at the draft system.

Whitehorn, who went to jail as an adamant draft resister with his mother's support, disavowed her efforts last week and told Judge Gus Solomon he now wanted to register for the draft.

In a letter to the judge, he described himself as a pawn in a game played by an "overenthusiastic mother" and a "fancy San Francisco lawyer."

Judge Solomon, at a special hearing Monday, accepted that description and branded Evelyn Whitehorn, a 44-year-old divorcee from nearby Palo Alto, and the youth's former lawyer, Aubrey Grossman, as publicity seekers.

Mrs. Whitehorn argued during her son's trial that since he was not old enough to marry or sign a contract without her consent, he was not old enough to join the army without her permission.

At that time, the teen-ager supported her argument even though it landed him in jail.

Whitehorn has served nearly three months in jail since he was sentenced May 28.

Court Reduces Sentence Of Kiesinger Slapper

BERLIN (Reuters) — A woman who slapped West German Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger in the face had a 12-month jail sentence reduced Monday to a four-month suspended term.

Beate Klarsfeld, 30, hit the chancellor at a Christian Democrat party congress in West Berlin in November and publicly accused him of being a Nazi.

An Appeal Court reduced the sentence but described the attack as a "humiliating act."

Mrs. Klarsfeld is German-born and is married to a French Jew whose father was killed by the Nazis in Auschwitz concentration camp.

Kiesinger joined the Nazi party in 1933 and served during the Second World War in the radio department of the foreign ministry.

As it should be in a free society, the fate of all politicians is in your hands.

During the campaign I have put forth my view that the present government, despite past accomplishments, has neither the solutions nor the energy, or personnel to solve the problems of the 70's, and no longer has the ability to get the job done.

I emphasize the experience, ability and energies of this region's Liberal Team and of a party which offers British Columbia the only moderate alternative to the extremes of RIGHT and LEFT!

I want to thank my opponents for their courtesy and good sportsmanship during the campaign. They have followed what I believe is an important tradition of our riding, a debate of the issues and not the personalities of the candidates.

I have always deeply appreciated the opportunity of serving that the voters have given me in the past, first in Municipal Government and later as your M.L.A.

My only promise, as on previous occasions, is to do my best.

Yours sincerely

Oceans of hot water!

a Cascade electric water heater for just 3<sup>95</sup> a month!

...and you own it!

B.C. Hydro has splashed cold water on the high purchase price of water heaters. For just $3.95 a month, which can be added to your hydro bill, you can have a modern, dependable Cascade electric water heater installed in your home.

This is not a rental plan. You own the water heater. Operating costs are low, usually less than five cents per day, per person. And you're protected from costly repair bills by a full ten year tank warranty.

The Cascade water heater provides all the hot water your family will ever need. And all Cascade heaters are performance certified by the Canadian Standards Association.

If you'd like a silent, clean Cascade water heater installed in your home, see your dealer. Remember, Cascade is a quality standard, not a brand name. It's available from most leading manufacturers.

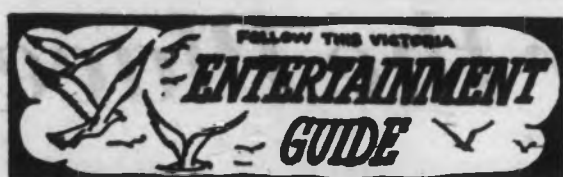

You won't have to float a loan to afford it.

Jealous Rammer Kills Two

LOS ANGELES — Police are holding Bessie Bradford, 26, for double murder in the jealousy-deaths of her husband Charles, 27, and their son Myke, 3.

Police said Mrs. Bradford became jealous when her husband gave a ride to a girl, Dale Johnson, 19. She used her car to chase her husband's motorcycle for several blocks, then rammed it, flipping it over. The girl was in critical condition in hospital.

SYDNEY — A court martial cleared Capt. John Stevenson, 47, of any negligence in the collision of his Australian aircraft carrier Melbourne and the U.S. destroyer Frank Evans, in which 74 Americans died. He was declared "honorably acquitted" on a directed verdict that there was no case for him to answer.

NAPLES — Rear Admiral Alan Fleming, commander of the U.S. Fleet Air Mediterranean, and seven others were rescued after jumping into the sea to escape a fire in their motor launch, which later sank.

LOS ANGELES — William Garretson, 20, caretaker at the home where actress Sharon Tate and four others were murdered Aug. 8, sued the city for $1,250,000 for false arrest. He was held three days after the killings, then cleared.

TORONTO — A girl born one month prematurely to Mrs. Beverly Thickson, 35, who died an hour before delivery, was reported in good condition. A brain hemorrhage killed the mother at her home.

LOS ANGELES — Paul Ferguson, 23, told his murder trial his brother Thomas, 18, killed silent screen star Ramon Novarro, 69. He said Novarro planned to make him a star and added his brother woke him to tell him Novarro was dead.

VERSAILLES, France — Zacharie Insausti, one of the unluckiest inventors of all time, died at 85. One of his many inventions was the retractable landing gear but he neglected to

Fittest Survive

While doing a spot of weeding in the garden the other day, I ran across three strong young salvia plants, evidently self-sown seedlings from last year's bedding plants, although they were stockier and obviously more vigorous than any salvia plants I had ever bought and set out.

One of these — the smallest — was potted up and given a spot in the sun porch, for the salvia makes an excellent winter-blooming pot plant for the house; the others were transplanted to the perennial border to add a touch of scarlet to the fall scene.

I think almost every gardener has noticed, at one time or another, the exceptionally sturdy development of self-sown seedlings in the garden. I know that volunteer forget-me-nots, polyanthus primroses, California poppies and even tomato plants seem much stronger and more vigorous than the same plants carefully sown in the spring.

It seems to me that two factors are responsible for the added vigor and "oomph" of these waifs and strays. One is nature's law of survival of the fittest — out of the thousands of seeds scattered by the parent plants, the seedlings we find are the strongest and toughest of the lot.

The other factor is the timing of the sowing. When a plant scatters its own seed, it chooses the best possible time, while the seed is fresh yet thoroughly ripened.

Not only does nature sow her seeds when they are in prime condition for germinating, but she sees to it that they germinate at the time most favorable for their survival. Some plants cannot survive through the winter while in their delicate baby stage; these seeds have a built-in delaying chemical that holds them dormant through the winter. These germinate strongly in the spring after being exposed to frost through the winter and upon receiving the signal from the warming soil that it is safe to emerge.

Other plants of a less delicate nature will germinate very quickly when self-sown in the late summer or early autumn; in these, I think, a n o t h e r factor contributing to their exceptional vigor lies in the fact that they have had time to become well established before the frosts and gales of winter arrive.

Seems to me we can take a tip from nature in this regard and try a few experimental sowings of flower seeds within the next few weeks. Some kinds which will often do quite well from a sowing now are Iceland poppies, California poppies, Brompton stocks, clarkias, cornflowers, sweet alyssum and coriopsis.

This is probably the best time of the year, too, to sow seeds of the fabulous Gloriosa daisy. Since I distributed free seeds of this plant away back in 1962, several new strains have been developed, including a fully double type and one called Irish Eyes which has a green centre.

This late summer sowing is quite different from what is known as fall sowing, in which seeds are put in the ground after the soil has lost its warmth, to be dormant all winter and germinate in the spring. In a late summer sowing, we want our seeds to germinate now, and to produce reasonably large seedling plants, sturdy enough to stand up under the rigors of a normal winter but not so far advanced that they start to flower in the autumn.

The greatest hazard to these plants is not winter cold, but winter wet. I'd venture to say that far more garden plants are lost from drowning than are ever killed by frost.

With this in mind it is a good idea to make your sowings in a specially constructed seed bed raised a few inches above the surrounding soil, such a bed will drain freely through the rainy season, no puddles will stand, and the bed will warm up earlier in the spring, starting the seedlings into active growth well ahead of the rest of the garden.

U.S. Tilted the Moon

CAPE COD — Weatherwise, this has been a disastrous summer for large parts of the world. Everyone has his own theory as to the cause of it, but no one has been able to scientifically pinpoint what's happened until now.

Professor Heinrich Applebaum, who is stationed at the Endless Summer Observatory, at Endless Summer, Mass., revealed the reason that the weather had gone awry this year was because of the Moon landings.

"They should not," said Professor Applebaum, "have taken the rocks off the moon."

"Why not?" I asked him. "Because," said the professor, "it's made the Moon unbalanced."

"You mean taking a few rocks off the Moon could change its balance?" "Exactly. The moon was in perfect conjunction to the Earth. Each rock was placed just so, and even disturbing one could have a magnetic effect causing just enough tilt to the Moon to bring all the bad weather."

"It's hard to believe," I said.

"Don't believe me. Here are my mathematical calculations. Every rock removed from the Moon is responsible for one lousy day of weather on Earth."

I studied the calculations. "Oh gosh," I said, "these figures prove you're right." "Of course I'm right," said Applebaum, erasing his blackboard. "But what worries me is not only the rocks that the astronauts took off the Moon but the garbage they left up there in its place."

"Look, there's the laser machine, the bottom half of the lunar module, a television camera and heaven knows what else the astronauts threw out of their ship."

"With all this stuff lying in the Sea of Tranquility the weight of the Moon has completely tilted, causing unreasonable tide swells and variable shifts in the magnetic forces that control the solar system. I have named this the Earth-Moon Garbage Effect."

"You're too modest Professor," I said. "It should be the Applebaum Earth-Moon Garbage effect."

"That's up to the Academy of Sciences," the professor said.

"But did you know this before the astronauts went up?" I asked.

"I suspected it, but I was counting on the Russians landing on another part of the Moon to balance the part we landed on. They kept saying they were going to do it. Presuming they would have removed as many rocks and left as much junk on their part of the Moon as we did, the tilt should have evened out."

"Then you would say the Soviets are really responsible for the bad weather because they failed to land on the Moon at the same time we did?"

"Right. I believe the Soviets have a lot of explaining to do."

"But what can we do to bring the Moon back to its original centre of gravity?"

"The crew of Apollo 12 have to take the Moon rocks back and put them in the exact places Armstrong and Aldrin took them from. Then they have to clean up the mess left by Apollo 11 and bring all the garbage back to Earth."

"But, Professor, if the crew of Apollo 12 do all that, they won't have any time for their own experiments."

"Tough," said Applebaum. "Do you want to have scientific Moon achievements or a miffen winter?"

Thirteen Fatal

LONDON (NANA) — Sharon Tate had completed several scenes for her new film with the unlikely title of 13 and was to complete the film after the birth of her baby. The title was to be changed because Sharon had already made a movie called 13 with David Niven and Deborah Kerr.

But no one could change the bad luck for poor Sharon.

That cream Rolls-Royce her husband Roman Polanski had given her for what was to be her last birthday, I understand, is being sold. Roman had been preparing his next film, Day of the Dolphin, at their home in Belgravia. His friends are urging him to continue with the film. The heartbroken director is giving up the Bel Air home and many other hillside residents are putting their mansions on the market, too.

The British Film Institute is giving a reception for Hal Wallis September 16 to launch what they call a "retrospective" of his major films. Hal and wife Martha Hyer are in London while Hal produces his latest epic, Anne of a Thousand Days with Richard Burton.

Rex Reed, the critic and author, will be on the other side of the reviewing fence when he plays Myron, the half-man-half-woman section of Myra Breckinridge for 20th-Fox. As you already know, Rachel Welch is the female-man half of the Gore Vidal character. Is there any film being made now that does not have a homo or transvestite?

"I'd rather be a bad actor than a bad bridge player," says Omar Sharif. In spite of his busy film schedule, Omar has made an arrangement to spearhead a U.S. bridge tour in January.

Rex Harrison arrives in London early next month to begin rehearsals for his first play here in a decade, The Lionel Lincoln. Wife Rachel is planning to make a film during this period. Rex was supposed to star for Marn Spiegel in The Right Honorable Gentleman. I can't imagine what is holding up the production which has a straightforward story of what happened to politician Mr. Charles Dilke when he became involved in a Victorian era scandal. It ruined him, as later the scandal of John Profumo and Christine Keeler was to eliminate him from the political scene. Christine is currently completing her memoirs. It should be interesting to read her version of what really went on.

Sammy Davis doesn't believe in being robbed, so he never carries money on him. When things have to be paid for, one of his entourage dips into his own wallet and Sammy reimburses him later.

Outhouse Politics Charged

As election campaigning wound up throughout the Island, a charge of restroom politicking and a gale picnic took place in Cowichan-Malahat.

The charge came from NDP candidate Robert Strachan who said Monday that the latest example of "dirty politics" was at "the Social Credit barbecue."

"The toilets were adorned by the picture and Social Credit party workers also requested pictures of Berger so they could be placed in restrooms also."

On an open-line radio program, Mr. Strachan called for a public apology from the Social Credit organization.

He said the NDP had campaigned purely on what it considered the issues — control of rising costs, development of secondary industry, provincial income tax, increased old age pensions, free prescription drugs for pensioners, dental care for children, new agricultural policies, eventual elimination of school taxes on real estate and continuation of the home-owner's grants.

The picnic was for Social Credit candidate Dr. Charles Enns at Pine Paddocks in Duncan Sunday.

More than 1,000 people attended for Indian and Scottish dancing, guitar music, a horseman's exhibition and variety of food ranging from corn on the cob to Chinese and East Indian dishes.

Dr. Enns said he was amazed at the turnout. "If the response here is any indication," he said, "a Social Credit victory in Cowichan-Malahat is assured Wednesday."

Campaign officials said they had expected about 1,500 people at the event.

'Apple' Ads Rapped

DUNCAN — Cowichan and District school board Monday night passed a motion of censure against the tone of the "apple" campaign being conducted by the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

"I think the federation is using its current advertising campaign as political blackmail," said trustee Kurt Horn. "I think they are doing themselves a lot of harm and we are going to be caught in the backlash. I think their method was most unethical and I am surprised they have not been rapped somewhere along the line."

"They say that there is not an apple in the candidate's ad he is either apathetic, indifferent or knows nothing about education. 'I understand they have also aligned themselves with a particular political party and that is a dangerous impression to create.' 'I do not question the federation's motive or sincerity but it is their method.'"

"There is no doubt about it, they have done themselves harm," said chairman Bruce Devitt. "Most of the teachers are sincere and dedicated people. As a body we have no right to censure anyone. It is their democratic right. The politician who accepted the apple should probably be bearing the brunt of your ire. This is democracy at work."

Road Crash Kills One

FANNY BAY — A Port Alberni man was killed Sunday when the car he was believed to have been driving went off the highway about two miles north of here.

Dead is John Kliza, 58. He was the third traffic fatality in the Comox Valley this summer. Injured in the crash, but not seriously, were Mr. Kliza's wife and daughter.

Scottish Monster Outshone

By BILL MILLER

MALLAIG, Scotland (Reuters) — The Loch Ness monster is in danger of becoming a has-been.

The road to Loch Ness, travelled by thousands of tourists hoping to get a glimpse of Nessie, was quiet this weekend for the first time in years.

***

The reason: Nessie has competition from a monster named Morag, which surfaced in Loch Morar only 50 miles away.

Morag almost overturned two men in a boat on the loch. They said they had to beat it back with an oar and finally shoot at it before it descended into the depths of Morar.

Almost overnight their sighting created a tourist boom in the Loch Morar area, much to the dismay of its one-man police force who has a hard time controlling the traffic jams.

***

The two men, William Simpson and Duncan McDonnell, from the village of Mallaig near the loch, said the monster bit a chunk off of their oar, and this now has become one of the sights to see in Loch Morar.

They described the monster as being about 60 feet long, with dirty brown humps and covered in fungus.

Their encounter revived local tales of a curse. Villagers say that appearance of Morag foretells the death of a member of the McDonnell or Gillies families.

***

But curse or not, hundreds are flocking to Loch Morar to get a glimpse of Morag and a circus has offered $12,000 to the man who captures the monster alive.

'Richest' Woman Dies, 65

NEW YORK (AP) — Ailsa Mellon Bruce, 65, said to be the richest woman in the United States, died Monday in hospital.

Mrs. Bruce, whose wealth was estimated at $500,000,000 by Fortune magazine last year, had devoted herself to various charitable and philanthropic pursuits in recent years.

***

The daughter of Andrew W. Mellon, who served as secretary of the treasury and U.S. ambassador to London, and the former Nora McMullen, Mrs. Bruce married David K. E. Bruce, a diplomat, in 1926. In 1945 she divorced Bruce, formerly ambassador to London.

***

The grandfather of Mrs. Bruce, Thomas Mellon, emigrated in 1818 to the U.S. from a tiny farm near Belfast, Northern Ireland and went on to amass one of the country's great fortunes.

Esquimalt Paying Share For Juvenile Project

Esquimalt council voted Monday night to pay its $375.14 share of the cost of an attendance centre for juveniles that will start a four-month trial period Oct. 1.

***

The provincial government is to pay half the cost, and the rest would be shared among Esquimalt, Oak Bay, Victoria and Saanich. Esquimalt's share would be 8 per cent of $4,689.25.

The centre would be an auxiliary resource to the judge and probation officers of the family division of Provincial Court and it would house offices of a supervisor and two other workers.

Plans include a program of counselling, community work projects, supervised study time, weekend camps and supervised recreation. The centre would attempt to improve the juveniles' relationship with adults so they would not be returned to court.

***

The proposal is to rent a building at 528 Niagara from Christ Church Cathedral.

Ald. J. W. Bell explained that the program had been tested in parts of Great Britain and the United States and been successful.

Attendance will probably be by court order, although the committee hopes some might attend voluntarily.

***

The program will be geared to keep the juveniles occupied during late afternoon and evening, on weekends and on Monday holidays.

Ald. Bell said a per diem rate would probably be charged juveniles from municipalities other than the participating four.

Schreyer Outlaws Slush Funds

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The federal government is promising, in the words of Otto Lang, minister responsible for energy and water resources, "to break through the bureaucratic and jurisdictional maze" and control pollution.

Grits' 'Help' Amuses

OTTAWA — There is some quiet chuckling to be heard on Parliament Hill over the way the federal Liberals have been "taking a helpful hand," as some of them call it, in the British Columbia election.

First it was Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford, taking a swing in a Victoria speech, at the provincial government for "falling" to protect the taxpayer from abuses by business and industry.

Then just Monday it was minister without portfolio Otto Lang talking about what the federal government intends having the provinces do about water pollution.

Nobody at Lang's press conference asked specifically about British Columbia.

They didn't have to — for Lang spoke of Lake Okanagan and the Fraser River as "sad stories" in pollution.

They were part of "our heritage," he said, "and we cannot seem to spill them fast enough."

REVENGE? How come two federal ministers are taking this kind of a hand in west coast politics — giving aid and comfort to the New Democrats?

Well, in Ottawa's eyes, a strong provincial government is a difficult provincial government to handle, and British Columbia's Social Credit administration was neither weak nor easily manipulated by the federal Liberals.

So there could be an element of revenge in it.

Tire Preserver Proposed For Longer Human Life

WASHINGTON (AP)—A British biologist who believes man's normal lifespan may reach 100 years urged Monday that a major scientific nation conduct intensive research into the possibilities for controlling the aging process.

Dr. Alex Comfort of University College, London, said if a nation such as the United States applied adequate resources to such a program it could determine in 10 years whether it is practical to retard aging to a significant degree.

The researcher, a physician as well as a biologist, addressed the opening session of the Eighth International Congress of Gerontology, with scientists from more than 40 countries attending.

Among potentially-favorable avenues of exploration, he said, would be human trials of classes of anti-oxidant chemicals now used by the rubber industry to help prevent deterioration of automobile tires exposed to sunlight, and by the food-processing industry as additives to help prevent spoilage.

Such chemicals are also known as scavengers of so-called free-radicals—the latter being molecular-breakdown fragments associated with all chemical reactions, including biochemical ones.

Comfort said trials of such materials in mice by Dr. Denham Harman of the University of Nebraska produced a 40-per-cent gain in longevity among the rodents.

VANCOUVER — Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba said here Monday that his NDP government was moving to outlaw the payment of political "slush funds" to the party that holds power.

Mr. Schreyer, who arrived from Manitoba to lend "moral support" to the NDP election campaign in B.C., said, "democracy is the poorer for it" when lavish advertising campaigns, paid for by the donations of big business, were used during election campaigns.

At a press conference shortly after his arrival at 3 p.m. Monday, Mr. Schreyer added that large advertisements in newspapers for government departments just before elections were "an abuse of the Elections Act" and "a misuse of public money."

The 33-year-old Manitoba premier said he had not seen any such advertisements in B.C. newspapers, but he had seen them in Manitoba.

The slush funds, he said, had stopped when he "blundered into them" two months after becoming premier — the first provincial NDP premier in Canada's history.

Without appearing to cite a specific case, Mr. Schreyer spoke of "an architect who calls up and says, 'Who do I send the 5 per cent to?'"

Mr. Schreyer said his reply was, "What 5 per cent?" and the caller was referred to the minister of finance. There was no law yet prohibiting the slush fund, which had probably some thousands of dollars, he said, but it would be NDP policy in Manitoba to refuse acceptance of the funds and eventually prohibit them.

He said he learned subsequently that these funds had often been paid "clandestinely" to the party holding power, and in a way "often not in the public interest."

In Winnipeg, former Manitoba premier Walter Weir said Monday his Progressive Conservative government received no kickbacks on government contracts.

"I have no idea of arrangements of this type," said Mr. Weir, opposition leader. "It's news to me."

"There were no telephone calls while I was in office," said Mr. Weir, referring to Mr. Schreyer's statement that he received a call from an architect who asked "where do I send my 5 per cent?"

Finance Minister Saul Cherniack said in an interview that he had received a phone call.

"I've been sitting on it for some time. I don't know whether it was the same person."

Mr. Cherniack said he "would rather wait for the premier to return" before commenting further.

Mr. Weir suggested: "the only possible reason for making the statement could be in preparation for the B.C. campaign."

Mr. Weir did not elaborate but said he did not know why Mr. Schreyer did not make the statement in Manitoba.

***

Mr. Weir, commenting on Mr. Schreyer's announcement of legislation to make public the source of political party funds, said Progressive Conservative money comes from VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier Bennett said Monday kickbacks on government contracts in B.C. stopped Aug. 1, 1952, when Social Credit came to power.

He was commenting on a statement by Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer that he plans to end a system where professional firms gave a percentage of their fees back to the Manitoba governing party on government contracts.

"We abolished all that political patronage," Premier Bennett said at a news conference.

CARIBOO SAVING "When we were building the Cariboo road we saved 42 per cent on unit prices on that one and millions and millions of dollars elsewhere."

Like Mr. Schreyer, Mr. Bennett did not refer specifically to past administrations.

Commenting on Mr. Schreyer's visit here to address a rally Monday night in New Westminster in support of New Democratic Party leader Tom Berger, the premier said:

"I hope he enjoys the weather here and by that I don't mean the political weather."

HOME PROBLEMS He said that instead of coming here, Mr. Schreyer should stay in Manitoba and get down to the business of eliminating hospital premiums, amusement and automobile taxes which do not exist in B.C.

Mr. Bennett said he'd like to return the visit "and get the Liberals and the Conservatives together in Manitoba and run a free enterprise election in Manitoba and throw the socialists out."

Bennett Guess 33-45

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier W. A. C. Bennett Monday predicted his Social Credit party will remain in power after Wednesday's provincial election with "a minimum of 60 per cent and up to 72 per cent" of the seats in the 55-seat legislature.

This means that his government will hold at least 33 seats—the same number it held after the Sept. 12, 1966, election—and up to a maximum of 45, he said.

The premier told a news conference that his current cabinet will remain intact although there will be "some changes."

"We are living in a changing world and there will be some changes," he said.

He did not elaborate, but one campaign pledge has been to make ministerial portfolios Phil Gagliardi a "full-fledged" cabinet minister if Social Credit is returned.

Mr. Bennett said there was

JERUSALEM (UPI)—Arab guerrillas fired two Soviet-made rockets into the heart of Jerusalem early Tuesday — the first shelling of the Israeli city since the 1967 Middle East war.

Israeli military officials said there were no casualties or damage.

The 122MM rockets, the same kind used by the Viet Con in South Vietnam, apparently were fired from the southern edge of the city, the officials said. The guerrillas fled the firing sites.

NEAR HOTEL One of the missiles landed near the crowded Ganei Yehuda Hotel and the second slammed into the city's Baqa'a district.

Both impacted in open areas about on-fourth mile from the old frontier that once separated Israeli and Jordanian sections of Jerusalem.

IRAQ CONDEMNED

Israeli officials said they immediately ordered a search for the guerrillas. The rockets are about six feet long and weigh 100 pounds and can be fired from an improvised launcher.

The shelling followed a day in which Israeli condemned Iraq for barbarity in the execution of 15 persons, including two Jews, for spying and pledged to save other Jews residing in the Arab nation.

NDP Rally

Berger's Finale Hailed by 6,000

VANCOUVER—More than 6,000 at a rally Monday night in Queen's Park Arena in New Westminster gave NDP leader Tom Berger and Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer a standing ovation.

Mr. Schreyer told the meeting, "It is not easy to buck the establishment, but buck it we must." He urged the party to "keep on with your noble objectives."

Mr. Schreyer said he was convinced Mr. Berger would be able to provide "prudent and sound government" for B.C.

Mr. Berger, in his last major election campaign speech, promised that a bill of rights brought into the legislature by for British Columbians would be the first piece of legislation by an NDP government.

Repeating his earlier promise that the office of provincial ombudsman would be created, Mr. Berger said, "And I can tell you this — it won't be Phil Gagliardi."

"GOING DOWN" Each cabinet minister who has used his name in government department advertisements during the campaign "is going down to defeat in this election," Mr. Berger said, bringing a tremendous cheer from the packed arena.

Mr. Berger promised that he would "put temptation out of the reach of politicians" by prohibiting government advertising during election campaigns.

BEST, WORST He said Mr. Bennett "can appeal to the worst in people, but the New Democrats appeal to the best in people."

"We're going to have a government come Wednesday that is dedicated to social justice."

"Tonight I'm calling for unity. I'm calling for a mandate. I'm calling for a majority."

South Korean troops immediately countered the communist ambush and killed one of the several intruders, the ministry said.

The ministry said that patrols were continuing to search for the rest of the communist infiltrators. But it gave no account how long the initial fight lasted.

ST. GALLEN, SWITZERLAND (AP)—A Swiss engineer told Monday how he smuggled his 19-year-old East German fiancée 200 miles to freedom in the converted gasoline tank of his English automobile.

Tailfieberweg, 27, brought his bride-to-be — Friedl Linke — across Hungary and Yugoslavia to the safety of Austria.

The girl went on a camping vacation to Lake Balaton, Hungary, where she had arranged to meet Baldenweg.

Baldenweg paid $1,000 for a large Alvis special car and set to work fitting a 22-gallon gas tank. But it held only four gallons. The rest was a cramped compartment for the girl with a thin air tube.

Ten days ago their flight to freedom began. "I don't know how we got through," said the brunette from Dresden. "At times I thought I was going to die in there."

Baldenweg said that twice, after passing the Hungarian and Yugoslav frontiers, he pulled his fiancée out of the compartment.

"She was unconscious and turning blue," he said.

Camel Caravan Reopens Route Of Marco Polo

GILGIT, Pakistan (Reuters)—A caravan of 15 camels laden with Chinese goods reached Misgar, 127 miles northwest of here, today after reopening the ancient silk route between China and Pakistan.

The trade route over what has been described as the world's most difficult terrain in the Karakoram Mountains was travelled by the 13th century globetrotter Marco Polo. But it was closed 20 years ago after the Communists gained power in China.

The caravan which swayed into the little West Pakistan border town was accompanied by 16 Chinese traders mounted on horses.

The packs slung across the camels' backs contained goods worth 300,000 rupees (more than $80,000) and will be offered for sale in Misgar market Tuesday.

The route was reopened under a trade agreement between the two countries signed in October, 1967.

Deformed Baby Threat High in German Measles

By G. T. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughters, aged 21 and 25, never have had mumps or German measles. The older girl had regular measles, but the younger one had gamma globulin injection, and we never knew whether she had measles then. She had a slight rash. Do you recommend injections at this age for either or both? I get varied opinions from doctors.—A. G.

Let's take the diseases one at a time. Regular measles does not pose the threat of deformed babies that German measles does, and in any event, the older girl is immune, and the one who had globulin probably is. So there's nothing to do about that.

As to mumps vaccine, at the girls' ages I would not think it necessary, but it is interesting to note that you have had varied opinions from other doctors.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: If a lady, 68, had stomach x-rays and did not notice a big safety pin that was left in the gown by someone else, would it interfere with the x-rays and would that be dangerous?—M. M.

No. Doubtless the doctor who read the x-rays said, "Now who the dickens left a safety pin in the patient's gown?" but that's all.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When a doctor diagnoses a fibroid uterus, is the uterus removed along with the fibroids?—F. S.

Ordinarily yes—provided the fibroids are causing enough trouble to warrant removal. In a great many instances, however, the fibroids do not cause trouble, and are not removed, but merely watched, lest they change size or otherwise give indication that removal is in order. Many times fibroids will shrink after menopause.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How effective is home electrolysis treatment, the type you order by mail? Professional electrolysis treatments are so expensive.

I am 23 and plagued with unwanted coarse hair on the face and around the breast. How can I get rid of it?—A. W.

Superfluous hair is usually a familiar matter. People of some nationalities are more subject to it, it also runs in families.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For nine years I have had an underactive thyroid and take three grains of thyroid hormone a day. Otherwise I am healthy. I have a daughter, 11, but would like to have another baby. What risk would be involved? I am 34.—Mrs. C. S.

I don't see that any risk is involved.

Note to Mrs. A. R. B.: The so-called "cholesterol danger" from eggs has been much exaggerated in my opinion, but if your family doesn't like them there's no reason why you can't get protein from cheese, meat, fish, and fowl.

Inco, Falconbridge: Strikers Hold Out

SUDBURY, Ont. (UPI) — Nickel mines and refineries in this northern Ontario city which produces about half the world's supply of nickel remained shut down Monday with scant hope of reopening for some time.

One report noted it was the first time in years this one-industry city has been free of the usual clouds of sulphur dioxide that belch from the nickel and copper ore processing plants. It was believed the first time all the nickel mines here were closed at one time. Sudbury's major nickel concern is the International Nickel Co. which employs a total of 18,000 here and at its refining centre in Port Colborne in southern Ontario.

Inco is now into its sixth week of a strike by Local 6500 of the United Steel Workers of America. The union called the strike at midnight July 10, after four months of labor-management negotiations failed to produce a new wage and fringe-benefits settlement.

Inco strikers were joined last Thursday by 3,200 employees of Falconbridge's second nickel producer, Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd., this walkout occurred for almost identical reasons as the one at Inco—failure to reach agreement on a new contract.

Meatcutters Approve Pact

VANCOUVER (CP)—The 800 meatcutters locked out of 103 Vancouver-area supermarkets for three months will return to work this week following ratification of a new contract which includes a 39-hour work week and pay raises of up to 75 cents an hour over two years.

The meatcutters, members of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union, voted 463 to 21 Sunday in favor of the contract.

clerk who had also been locked out.

The union had asked for $1 an hour pay increase.

Stores affected by the lockout were those operated by Safeway, Super Valu, Shop-Easy, High-Low, Food Fair and Loblaws.

Most of the stores had opened without meat departments after reaching a settlement with 3,000

Union secretary George Johnston Sunday hailed the 39-hour week as the first break-through of the 40-hour week for butchers in North America.

He said head meatcutters, their assistants and journeymen meatcutters will receive $16 a week retroactive to May 1 for a new rate of $168 weekly, and an additional $14 a week effective May 4, 1970.

Employees in other categories will receive $26 more weekly over the two-year period in stages of $14 and $12.

Vacations are extended under the new contract. Meats while operations returned to normal at Vancouver International Airport Sunday after a court injunction granted Saturday halted picketing there by 100 striking oil workers.

Business Topics

Capital Spending Jumps

An increase in capital expenditures on new construction, machinery and equipment is expected over earlier estimates in all parts of Canada except the Atlantic provinces, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

The bureau earlier announced a mid-year survey of government, corporate and institutional capital spending plans showed an increase to $17,356,000,000 from $17,046,000,000 reported to the bureau at the start of 1969. Total last year was $15,678,000,000.

A United Nations report says world trade last year was exceptionally good, with exports rising by 11.1 per cent to $28,700,000.

This trade expansion was achieved despite many political and economic disturbances, and 1968 was second only to 1964 for world trade this decade.

Coal production in Canada fell to 641,715 tons last month from 747,091 in July last year, says the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Imports rose to 2,184,239 from 1,253,196 in the same months.

A spurt in sales of industrial and transportation equipment and supplies led wholesale trade up 8.6 per cent to $1,566,644,000 in June from $1,442,232,000 a year earlier, says the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. These sales themselves were up 22.3 per cent in June, and 18 per cent higher in the half-year.

The International Air Transport Association reports that 2,375,000 revenue air passengers were carried on the North Atlantic route in the first half of this year, an increase of 12.9 per cent over the same period in 1968.

U.S. Steel Made to Stop Reciprocal Buying Deals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. justice department announced Monday final settlement of its antitrust suit prohibiting the United States Steel Corp. from entering into reciprocal purchasing arrangements with customers and suppliers for the next 10 years.

A final consent judgment was entered by the U.S. district court in Pittsburgh. Effective immediately, it concludes a civil suit filed last June 13.

SINCE 1955

The suit charged that U.S. Steel, America's largest steel-maker, had used its purchasing power since 1955 to promote sales in an attempt to monopolize the requirements of actual and potential suppliers of steel and steel products, e.g. cement, chemicals and other products.

The use of a company's economic power as a purchaser in an attempt to induce sales of its own products is a violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

The Pittsburgh-based company annually purchases about $2.5 billion worth of raw materials, supplies, equipment and services. In 1968, it had sales of $4.5 billion to rank as America's 10th largest industrial corporation.

The consent judgment does not constitute an admission by U.S. Steel of violating the law. But under it, the company agreed to many restrictions sought by the government.

Pompidou Pushes Austerity

PARIS (UPI)—President Georges Pompidou Monday speeded up preparation of a back-the-franc austerity program, calling in top government ministers concerned with pushing through the tough measures and heading off predicted worker unrest.

Pompidou wants the measures ready for a special Thursday cabinet meeting—the first meeting since devaluation of the franc was decided Aug. 8.

Prime Minister Jacques Chaban-Delmas met Labor Minister Joseph Fauriol, who was expected to confer again shortly with France's labor union leaders, angry to a man over devaluation of the franc which they regarded as reducing workers' purchasing power.

Teachers Using 'Political Blackmail'

Trustees Censure Apple Campaigning

DUNCAN — Cowichan and District school board Monday night passed a motion of censure against the tone of the "apple" campaign being conducted by the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

"I think the federation is using its current advertising campaign as political blackmail," said trustee Kurt Horn. "I think they are doing themselves a lot of harm and we are going to be caught in the backlash. I think their method was most unethical and I am surprised they have not been rapped somewhere along the line.

"They say if there is not an apple in the candidate's ad he is either apathetic, indifferent or knows nothing about education.

"I understand they have also aligned themselves with a particular political party and that is a dangerous impression to create.

"I do not question the federation's motive or sincerity but it is their method."

"There is no doubt about it, they have done themselves harm," said chairman Bruce Devitt. Most of the teachers are sincere and dedicated people. As a body we have no right to censure anyone. It is their democratic right. The politician who accepted the apple should probably be bearing the brunt of your ire. This is democracy at work."

"I take offence that you say the campaign is associated with any one party," said trustee E. A. Goddard, retired teacher. "You are saying 50,000 people are particularly identified with a party."

"The campaign is not for any one party because many candidates from various parties have taken a "bite of the apple," said trustee Andy Annand.

The board carried the motion to censure with trustee Goddard opposing the motion.

A delegation of Shawnigan Lake parents attended the meeting to question a letter they had received from the board regarding travel assistance for their children to school.

EIGHTEEN PARENTS
A letter was sent to 18 parents in the school district who receive transportation assistance.

It stated that parents driving their children to school would receive $1 per day for each school day that they transport their children to school.

"Transportation is paid on the understanding that your child is actually being transported in your own vehicle on each day. The board is to carry out a spot check to ensure the regulations are being carried out.

NOT OBEYED
"If the check indicates the regulation is not being adhered to the board may find it necessary to cancel the transportation assistance grant."

The delegation wanted the board to leave the rules regarding or to change the wording of the transportation assistance grant.

The chairman said maybe the transportation committee could work something out.

Crippled Carpenter

Injury 'Hot Potato'

DUNCAN — Carpenter Simon de Roche seems to be caught in a riddle for which there is no answer.

● He cannot work because he has been crippled by complications from an operation on a broken wrist sustained when he fell off a scaffold while working at the Cowichan and district hospital in November, 1965.

● He cannot qualify for welfare aid because the welfare people say the Workmen's Compensation Board is responsible for his case.

● The Workmen's Compensation Board says its responsibility has ended and any further treatment required by Mr. de Roche will have to be at his own expense.

● He cannot collect Unemployment Insurance.

"My wife has to go to work, and she is supporting me," Mr. de Roche said.

He feels the Workmen's Compensation Board is still responsible because the board approved the original operation which led to his present crippled condition.

It all started when a piece of bone was taken from Mr. de Roche's hip in December, 1966 to fuse his broken wrist. There was a second operation on the wrist in July 1967, and this was successful.

But Mr. de Roche's hip began to bother him, and became so bad he couldn't lift his left leg more than eight inches off the ground.

Therapy was attempted, but was unsuccessful, so Mr. de Roche's doctor applied to the board for approval of another operation on the hip.

This approval was refused. In a letter to Mr. de Roche, the board mentioned only his wrist, and said "the panel has found no greater disability in your left wrist than that recognized by the board."

Another letter from the board said the commissioners were of the opinion Mr. de Roche had been adequately compensated for the result of his injury in 1965.

It said the claim was terminated, and "any further treatment you may receive will have to be carried out on a private patient basis."

Boulevards

Parking Ruins

NANAIMO — City council Monday night agreed to advertise a bylaw prohibiting parking in boulevards.

Boulevards created by the new street paving program were being destroyed by people parking on them council was told.

A study will be undertaken to investigate new modes of financing water improvement. Ald. Ted Jenkinson said a new formula was needed because the old one was no longer equitable.

The city must pay its share for lines going through city's boundaries in spite of perhaps not getting any water from the lines, he said.

Ald. Gordon MacKay reported the city street-paving program had outstripped original estimates and about $100,000 normally scheduled for 1970 had already been spent.

Road Crash Kills One

FANNY BAY — A Port Alberni man was killed Sunday when the car he was believed to have been driving went off the highway about two miles north of here.

Dead is John Kliz, 58. His was the third traffic fatality in the Comox Valley this summer. Injured in the crash, but not seriously, were Mr. Kliz's wife and daughter.

Courtenay school district has been authorized by the education department to let a contract for $94,050 to Southern Construction of Port Alberni for a two-room addition to Comox junior high school.

Grounds, services, hardtop roads ready for building of luxury waterfront homes

Pioneer Farm Site Setting For Modern Luxury Living

By MARY TAYLOR

PARKSVILLE — Sports fishermen shoving off from the French Creek boat basin who for years have contemplated little except the driftwood covered beach will shortly find they are searching for salmon within a good fisherman's casting distance of more than a hundred luxury homes in the $35,000 to $85,000 price bracket.

In recent months, almost every available yard of waterfront property along the five-mile stretch from Parksville to Qualicum Beach has been subdivided — Glenhale Park, Breakwater, Eaglecrest, Pacific Island Estates, St. Evar Estates, Columbia Beach Estates, and probably at least half a dozen more.

MOST SOPHISTICATED

Of them all, Columbia Beach Estates with black-topped roads, sewage treatment plant, underground wiring, its own cablevision, street lighting and recreation area is undoubtedly the most sophisticated in concept, with future plans for as many as 500 lots and a resort hotel to accommodate 250 guests.

Developer Maden Zorkin of Nanaimo admits the prices of the lots are higher than those in some nearby areas but, he says, the whole concept is based on the idea of providing the highest standards.

"After all, there are only 22 waterfront lots out of what will eventually be as many as 500," he said. "Those are costly, true, but on the least expensive lots, the $8,000 ones, you must remember that there is already over $4,000 worth of services provided. That makes them less costly overall than unimproved lots at $4,000."

MANY ISLANDERS

Will the expensive homes become the prerogative of wealthy Americans?

Not according to the developers. Most of the enquiries and there have been an average of more than 40 visitors a day in the three weeks since the project was officially open to view — come from Islanders, with an occasional Victoria or Vancouver visitor intrigued by the attractive flower-bedded and night-lighted approach.

"This is a place for people who are hard-working, who have a pride of possession. I see it as a place for talented people."

LONG HISTORY

The broad beach and sweeping cedar-covered parklands, that make up Columbia Beach Estates have long been known to old-timers and newcomers to the Parksville-Qualicum area as the Tryon Farm. But the history of the property goes back far before that time.

Tom Tryon, whose family originally owned 360 acres along the waterfront, and who now is a sales representative for the development, remembers that the French Creek Indians lived nearby and that the chief and his family were their neighbours until the mid-1920s.

The first documented history of the property begins in 1887, when two gentlemen known as the Botts brothers obtained the land from the E and N Railways, and used it to raise pigs. The porkers were fattened on fish from the river and then shipped out by scow to Vancouver.

PROPERTY FARMED

But it was not too long before the Botts sold out to Henry Pillar who also farmed the property until 1912 when the Tryons purchased the land.

By 1914, the Tryons had built their home, a gracious country house of close to 30 rooms complete with servants quarters.

The Lieutenant-Governor and his lady were among occasional guests, and the big house was filled with the murmur of polite conversation, the hearty laughter or ardent fishermen, and the healthy racket of the Tryon's five children.

But the happiness was not unmarred. In 1916, Mr. Tryon died. Esther Tryon, though not a country woman by birth, determined to carry on. And she did, managing her 360 acres of mixed farming so well that she was able to put all five of her children through private school, while taking an active part in the community.

In 1924, disaster struck again, when the original home burned to the ground. But by 1925, Esther Tryon and her family were housed again, in an attractive house of Tudor design.

This lovely house with its breathtaking view of the sea stands on the property still. Completely modernized, it is now for sale.

POST OFFICE

Not only was the Tryon home a busy and hospitable one, but for years before the Tryon's arrival, the first post office in the area was situated on that property.

A hand-hewn log building that served as the French Creek post office from 1888 to 1912 has been preserved on the property with a plaque indicating that the first postmaster was W. H. Lee in 1888, followed by Henry Pillar in 1904.

Permission has been asked of the postmaster general to put the original building into use again as a post office as the development goes ahead and the growing population of Columbia Beach requires one.

OLD HOME

One of the questions most often asked Tom Tryon as he shows prospective purchasers over the development is: "Doesn't it upset you to see your old home and property cut up like this?"

But Mr. Tryon has retained nine acres for himself and his children, and today, only a millionaire can afford to sit on 125 acres of precious waterfront.

And the family name is preserved by Admiral Tryon Boulevard, a nautical name for a seaview road honoring Mr. Tryon's grandfather.

Island Campaigning Winds Up

Restroom Politicking Charged

As election campaigning wound up throughout the Island, a charge of restroom politicking and a gala picnic took place in Cowichan-Malahat.

The charge came from NDP candidate Robert Strachan who said Monday that the latest example of "dirty politics" was at "the Social Credit barbecue."

The toilets were adorned by my picture and Social Credit party workers also requested pictures of Berger so they could be placed in restrooms also."

On an open-line radio program, Mr. Strachan called for a public apology from the Social Credit organization.

He said the NDP had campaigned purely on what it considered the issues — control of rising costs, development of secondary industry, provincial first mortgages, increased old age pensions, free prescription drugs for pensioners, dental care for children, eventual elimination of school taxes on real estate and continuation of the home-owner's grants.

The picnic was for Social Credit candidate Dr. Charles Ennals at Pine Paddocks in Duncan Sunday.

More than 3,000 people attended for Indian and Scottish dancing, guitar music, a horse-riding exhibition and variety of food ranging from corn on the cob to Chinese and East Indian dishes.

Dr. Ennals said he was amazed at the turnout. "If the response here is any indication," he said, "a Social Credit victory in Cowichan-Malahat is assured Wednesday.

Campaign officials said they had expected about 1,500 people at the event.

In Tahsis, a conference called last year by Alberni-Sored candidate Dr. Howard McDiarmid during a recent campaign meeting.

He said that as a result of the conference, B.C. Hydro would supply power during 1971 over the Maquilla route from Vernon Camp and an extensive ground survey was being carried out for road link between Gold River and Tahsis.

In Nanaimo, an Indian brief presented to Premier Bennett last week by representatives of the B.C. Homemakers Assoc. was supported by NDP candidate Dave Stupich and Liberal hopeful Bob Plecas. Sored Frank Ney was not available for comment.

The brief urged that Indians be given financial support to develop methods of communication, between themselves, non-Indian society and all levels of government.

The brief suggested that $600,000 be apportioned among 52 B.C. Indians who would assume positions as liaison and information representatives.

WATER FINES COMING

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The federal government is promising, in the words of Otto Lang, minister responsible for energy and water resources, "to break through the bureaucratic and jurisdictional maze" and control pollution.

Grits' 'Help' Amuses

OTTAWA — There is some quiet chuckling to be heard on Parliament Hill over the way the federal Liberals have been "taking a helpful hand," as some of them call it, in the British Columbia election.

First it was Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford, taking a swing in a Victoria speech, at the provincial government for "failing" to protect the taxpayer from abuses by business and industry.

Then just Monday it was minister without portfolio Otto Lang talking about what the federal government intends having the provinces do about water pollution.

Nobody at Lang's press conference asked specifically about British Columbia.

They didn't have to — for Lang spoke of Lake Okanagan and the Fraser River as "sad stories" in pollution.

They were part of "our heritage," he said, "and we cannot seem to spoil them fast enough."

REVENGE?
How come two federal ministers are taking this kind of a hand in west coast politics — giving aid and comfort to the New Democrats?

Well, in Ottawa's eyes, a strong provincial government is a difficult provincial government to handle, and British Columbia's Social Credit administration was neither weak nor easily manipulated by the federal Liberals.

So there could be an element of revenge in it.

Death Stalls Manning Trip

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP)—The former premier of Alberta, Ernest Manning, has cancelled his trip to Alaska because of the death of a relative, Gov. Keith Miller said Monday.

British Doctor's Idea

Tire Preserver Proposed For Longer Human Life

WASHINGTON (AP)—A British biologist who believes man's normal lifespan may reach 100 years urged Monday that a major scientific nation conduct intensive research into the possibilities for controlling the aging process.

Dr. Alex Comfort of University College, London, said if a nation such as the United States applied adequate resources to such a program it could determine in 10 years whether it is practical to retard aging to a significant degree.

The researcher, a physician as well as a biologist, addressed the opening session of the Eighth International Congress of Gerontology, with scientists from more than 40 countries attending.

Among potentially-favorable avenues of exploration, he said, would be human trials of classes of anti-oxidant chemicals now used by the rubber industry to help prevent deterioration of automobile tires exposed to sunlight, and by the food-processing industry as additives to help prevent spoilage.

Such chemicals are also known as scavengers of so-called free-radicals—the latter being molecular-breakdown fragments associated with all chemical reactions, including biochemical ones.

Comfort said trials of such materials in mice by Dr. Denham Harman of the University of Nebraska produced a 40-per-cent gain in longevity among the rodents.

Schreyer Outlaws Slush Funds

By CLEMENT CHAPPEL

VANCOUVER — Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba said Monday that his NDP government was moving to outlaw the payment of political "slush funds" to the party that holds power.

Mr. Schreyer, who arrived from Manitoba to lend "moral support" to the NDP election campaign in B.C., said, "democracy is the poorer for it" when lavish advertising campaigns, paid for by the donations of big business, were used during election campaigns.

At a press conference shortly after his arrival at 3 p.m. Monday, Mr. Schreyer added that large advertisements in newspapers for government departments just before elections were "an abuse of the Elections Act" and "a misuse of public money."

The 33-year-old Manitoba premier said he had not seen any such advertisements in B.C. newspapers, but he had seen them in Manitoba.

The slush funds, he said, had stopped when he "blundered into them" two months after becoming premier — the first provincial NDP premier in Canada's history.

Without appearing to cite a specific case, Mr. Schreyer spoke of "an architect who calls up and says, 'Who do I send the 5 per cent to?'"

Mr. Schreyer said his reply was, "What 5 per cent?" and the caller was referred to the minister of finance. There was no law yet prohibiting the slush fund, which had probably sometimes reached hundreds of thousands of dollars, he said, but it would be NDP policy in Manitoba to refuse acceptance of the funds and eventually prohibit them.

He said he learned subsequently that these funds had often been paid "clandestinely" to the party holding power, and in a way "often not in the public interest."

In Winnipeg, former Manitoba premier Walter Weir said Monday his Progressive Conservative government received no kickbacks on government contracts.

"I have no idea of arrangements of this type," said Mr. Weir, opposition leader. "It's news to me."

"There were no telephone calls while I was in office," said Mr. Weir, referring to Mr. Schreyer's statement that he received a call from an architect who asked "where do I send my 5 per cent?"

Finance Minister Saul Cherniack said in an interview that he had received a phone call.

"I've been sitting on it for some time. I don't know whether it was the same person."

Mr. Weir suggested: "the only possible reason for making the statement could be in preparation for the B.C. campaign."

Mr. Weir did not elaborate but said he did not know why Mr. Schreyer did not make the statement in Manitoba.

Mr. Weir, commenting on Mr. Schreyer's announcement of legislation to make public the source of political party funds, said Progressive Conservative money comes from

Berger's Finale Hailed by 6,000

VANCOUVER—More than 6,000 at a rally Monday night in Queen's Park Arena in New Westminster gave NDP leader Tom Berger and Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer a standing ovation.

Mr. Schreyer told the meeting "It is not easy to buck the establishment, but buck it we must." He urged the party to "keep on with your noble objectives."

Mr. Schreyer said he was convinced Mr. Berger would be able to provide "prudent and sound government" for B.C.

Mr. Berger, in his last major election campaign speech, promised that a bill of rights brought into the legislature by for British Columbians would be the first piece of legislation by an NDP government.

Repeating his earlier promise that the office of provincial ombudsman would be created, Mr. Berger said, "And I can tell you this — it won't be Phil Gagliardi."

Jerusalem Shelled By Arabs

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Arab guerrillas fired two Soviet-made rockets into the heart of Jerusalem early Tuesday — the first shelling of the Israeli city since the 1967 Middle East war.

Israeli military officials said there were no casualties of damage.

One of the missiles landed near the crowded Ganei Yehuda Hotel and the second slammed into the city's Baqa'a district.

Israeli officials said they immediately ordered a search for the guerrillas. The rockets are about six feet long and weigh 100 pounds and can be fired from an improvised launcher.

Each cabinet minister who has used his name in government department advertisements during the campaign "is going down to defeat in this election," Mr. Berger said, bringing a tremendous cheer from the packed arena.

Mr. Berger promised that he would "put temptation out of the reach of politicians" by prohibiting government advertising during election campaigns.

Earlier, Mr. Bennett told a press conference here: "I ask for every vote — we need every vote."

The premier said B.C. must have a free enterprise government to keep moving ahead and if the promise of future greatness is to be fulfilled, that government must be Social Credit.

"We have not yet reached the zenith. We intend to keep moving ahead because the decade of the 70s will be the greatest ever seen, not only in this province, but in the history of this great nation," Mr. Bennett said.

EASY FOR HIM

He made his final appeal over two television channels in times purchased by the Social Credit party. The program, which also featured Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island Socreds, continued with an interruption for late night news broadcasts until midnight — the deadline for all broadcast election material.

At the press conference in the Hotel Vancouver, Mr. Bennett talked over the election issues, looked fit and relaxed as he said the campaign was "the easiest for me personally," but acknowledged that Social Credit faces a tough battle at the polls.

He was asked if the government was re-elected whether he

Socreds Ended Scheme

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier Bennett said Monday kickbacks on government contracts in B.C. stopped Aug. 1, 1952, when Social Credit came to power.

He was commenting on a statement by Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer that he plans to end a system where professional firms gave a percentage of their fees back to the Manitoba governing party on government contracts.

Camel Caravan Reopens Route Of Marco Polo

GILGIT, Pakistan (Reuters) — A caravan of 15 camels laden with Chinese goods reached Misgar, 127 miles northwest of here, Monday after reopening the ancient silk route between China and Pakistan.

The trade route over what has been described as the world's most difficult terrain in the Karakoram Mountains was travelled by the 13th century globetrotter Marco Polo. But it was closed 20 years ago after the Communists gained power in China.

The caravan which swayed into the little West Pakistan border town was accompanied by 16 Chinese traders mounted on horses.

The packs slung across the camels' backs contained goods worth 300,000 rupees (more than $80,000) and will be offered for sale in Misgar market today.

The route was reopened under a trade agreement between the two countries signed in October, 1967.

Gas Tank Hides Girl

ST. GALLEN, SWITZERLAND (AP) — A Swiss engineer told Monday how he smuggled his 19-year-old East German fiancée 200 miles to freedom in the converted gasoline tank of his English automobile.

Talf Baldeweg, 27, brought his bride-to-be — Friedl Linke — across Hungary and Yugoslavia to the safety of Austria.

The girl went on a camping vacation to Lake Balaton, Hungary, where she had arranged to meet Baldeweg.

Baldeweg paid $1,000 for a large Alvis special car and set to work fitting a 22-gallon gas tank. But it held only four gallons. The rest was a cramped compartment for the girl with a thin air tube.

Ten days ago their flight to freedom began. "I don't know how we got through," said the girl, "but I was going to die in there."

Baldeweg said that twice, after passing the Hungarian and Yugoslav frontiers, he pulled his fiancée out of the compartment.

"She was unconscious and turning blue," he said.

Marriage Secret 'Patience'

COWICHAN BAY — Patience and hard work is the secret to 60 years of marriage say Mr. and Mrs. Simon Witham of Cowichan Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. Witham, who have lived in the Duncan area for the past 33 years, celebrated their diamond jubilee wedding anniversary by holding open house for their friends and relatives after a family dinner at Cowichan Bay Inn Sunday.

"Our anniversary is actually on Sept. 30 but one of my daughters could not make it then or the celebration," said Mrs. Witham.

***
Congratulatory letters from the Queen, Prime Minister Trudeau and NDP leader T. C. Douglas, Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands MP, were read to the couple.

Mr. Witham, who is 88, said the secret to their long marriage was patience hard work and sobriety.

They have two daughters, two sons, 17 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Helicopter Rescues Hurt Hiker

PORT ALBERNI — Search and rescue workers Sunday located 15 hikers reported missing Saturday night on a church group trail hike on Mt. Arrowsmith.

A spokesman said one girl suffered a sprained ankle and was taken from the area by helicopter. The search was launched when the Mormon church group failed to return Saturday night.

The injured girl was Rayana Sayers, 18. Her companions built a makeshift stretcher and attempted to carry her out, but the going was too steep.

One of the party said they were "sort of cold during the night." She said they covered themselves with branches to keep warm.

Help Offered In Dispute

COURTENAY — Harry Harris NDP candidate for the Comox riding, has offered to help in a fire protection dispute at Kelsey Bay.

His offer was made during a recent visit to the northern area when he was told that the dispute was sparked when McMillan Bloedel took back its fire truck from Sayward village and that the volunteer fire brigade now refuses to answer calls.

***
Mr. Harris has also called for one-lane bridges replaced in the Sayward area. He said that driving conditions were dangerous, adding that he narrowly missed a head-on collision on the one-lane Salmon River bridge.

He spoke to more than 50 voters at Kelsey Bay where, he said, the same problems are experienced as in other areas where one large firm was the main employer.

***
He said land for housing was unobtainable or extremely expensive, shopping was confined to weekly visits to larger centres or to one-store monopoly and medical care or ambulance service delays caused concern.

WATER FINES COMING

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The federal government is promising, in the words of Otto Lang, minister responsible for energy and water resources, "to break through the bureaucratic and jurisdictional maze" and control pollution.

Grits' 'Help' Amuses

OTTAWA — There is some quiet chuckling to be heard on Parliament Hill over the way the federal Liberals have been "taking a helpful hand," as some of them call it, in the British Columbia election.

'INACTION'

He singled out provincial "inaction" on drug prices, a field where he considers his government has "come on strong."

Then just Monday it was minister without portfolio Otto Lang talking about what the federal government intends having the provinces do about water pollution.

Nobody at Lang's press conference asked specifically about British Columbia.

They didn't have to — for Lang spoke of Lake Okanagan and the Fraser River as "sad stories" in pollution.

They were part of "our heritage," he said, "and we cannot seem to spoil them fast enough."

REVENGE?

How come two federal ministers are taking this kind of a hand in west coast politics — giving aid and comfort to the New Democrats?

Well, in Ottawa's eyes, a strong provincial government is a difficult provincial government to handle, and British Columbia's Social Credit administration was neither weak nor easily manipulated by the federal Liberals.

So there could be an element of revenge in it.

Tire Preserver Proposed For Longer Human Life

WASHINGTON (AP)—A British biologist who believes man's normal lifespan may reach 100 years urged Monday that a major scientific nation conduct intensive research into the possibilities for controlling the aging process.

Dr. Alex Comfort of University College, London, said if a nation such as the United States applied adequate resources to such a program it could determine in 10 years whether it is practical to retard aging to a significant degree.

The researcher, a physician as well as a biologist, addressed the opening session of the Eighth International Congress of Gerontology, with scientists from more than 40 countries attending.

Among potentially-favorable avenues of exploration, he said, would be human trials of classes of anti-oxidant chemicals now used by the rubber industry to help prevent deterioration of automobile tires exposed to sunlight, and by the food-processing industry as additives to help prevent spoilage.

***

Such chemicals are also known as scavengers of so-called free-radicals—the latter being molecular-breakdown fragments associated with all chemical reactions, including biochemical ones.

Comfort said trials of such materials in mice by Dr. Denham Harman of the University of Nebraska produced a 40-per-cent gain in longevity among the rodents.

Schreyer Outlaws Slush Funds

By CLEMENT CHAFFLE

VANCOUVER — Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba said here Monday that his NDP government was moving to outlaw the payment of political "slush funds" to the party that holds power.

Mr. Schreyer, who arrived from Manitoba to lend "moral support" to the NDP election campaign in B.C., said, "democracy is the poorer for it" when lavish advertising campaigns, paid for by the donations of big business, were used during election campaigns.

At a press conference shortly after his arrival at 3 p.m. Monday, Mr. Schreyer added that large advertisements in newspapers for government departments just before elections were "an abuse of the Elections Act" and "a misuse of public money."

***

The 33-year-old Manitoba premier said he had not seen any such advertisements in B.C. newspapers, but he had seen them in Manitoba.

The slush funds, he said, had stopped when he "blundered into them" two months after becoming premier — the first provincial NDP premier in Canada's history.

Without appearing to cite a specific case, Mr. Schreyer spoke of "an architect who calls up and says, 'Who do I send the 5 per cent to?'"

Mr. Schreyer said his reply was, "What 5 per cent?" and the caller was referred to the minister of finance. There was no law yet prohibiting the slush fund, which had probably some times reached hundreds of thousands of dollars, he said, but it would be NDP policy in Manitoba to refuse acceptance of the funds and eventually prohibit them.

He said he learned subsequently that these funds had often been paid "clandestinely" to the party holding power, and in a way "often not in the public interest."

***

In Winnipeg, former Manitoba premier Walter Weir said Monday his Progressive Conservative government received no kickbacks on government contracts.

"I have no idea of arrangements of this type," said Mr. Weir, opposition leader. "It's news to me."

"There were no telephone calls while I was in office," said Mr. Weir, referring to Mr. Schreyer's statement that he received a call from an architect who asked "where do I send my 5 per cent?"

Finance Minister Saul Cherniack said in an interview that he had received a phone call.

"I've been sitting on it for some time. I don't know whether it was the same person."

Mr. Cherniack said he "would rather wait for the premier to return" before commenting further.

Mr. Weir suggested: "the only possible reason for making the statement could be in preparation for the B.C. campaign."

***

Mr. Weir, commenting on Mr. Schreyer's announcement of legislation to make public the source of political party funds, said Progressive Conservative money comes from

Milk Reaches 36-Cent Mark

Milk prices at a Victoria dairy will go up two cents a quart Friday, the second two-cent jump in less than a year. The new price of 36 cents a quart is an increase of five cents, or 16 per cent, in the past two years.

There was no announcement from other dairies.

Northwestern Creamery distributed a letter to customers Monday that said, "Cost of milk from the farmer, added labor costs, and the general increase in all other costs has finally forced us to increase dairy product prices. We have been able to limit the increase to two cents, effective Friday, August 29th, 1969."

NAME HIKE

The last increase, also a two-cent hike, was last September. There was a one-cent increase in November, 1967.

A spokesman for the Vancouver Island Dairymen's Association said he was unaware of any recent milk price increases to the farmer.

Mrs. Edgar Smith of the Consumers' Association said, "It's unfortunate that an essential food, that children depend on, has to go up. It wasn't discussed with us, and I think it should have been."

The Colonist was unable Monday night to reach any spokesman for any of the major dairies in Victoria.

New Highrise Approved For Quadra

Chairman of the community development committee of city council, Ald. Ian Stewart said Monday that approval had been given for a $3,600,000 mortgage loan to build a 17-storey, high-rise apartment building at the corner of View and Quadra.

The highrise will be started this year by West Park Developments, Vancouver. There will be 275 suites, some bachelorette and some one-bedroom, at rentals from $101 to $125 a month.

The ground floor will be used for commercial development. The $3,600,000 mortgage comes under the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation plan which permits federal loans for low-rental developments and holds the owners of buildings to a 5-per-cent per year return on their original investment.

Sewer Rule Hits Schools

By BILL STAVDAL

Saanich school board is seeking a Thursday meeting with the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health to discuss new sewage regulations which affect the development of the whole school district.

The school board received word Monday from health board director Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread that he will not approve any more temporary sewage holding tanks.

Dr. Whitbread also said that he is recommending to municipal councils that they withhold building permits for school projects where there is no "suitable" sewage disposal system.

Two on sewer: The peninsula has 18 schools, only two of them on sewer lines.

Bryan Shaw, school district building superintendent, told trustees that the future of the board's construction program is affected by Dr. Whitbread's ruling.

After hearing details of the health board's requirements at three schools, trustees criticized the health authority for allegedly moving beyond health and into engineering.

TRUCK PLAN

At Deep Cove and Brentwood elementary schools the school board last spring was refused permission to increase its septic tank and drain field system. It was given permission to build holding tanks which will be pumped out periodically.

Trucks will transfer the sewage to sewer pipes in Greater Victoria.

A similar arrangement has been approved for an expansion project at Saanichton elementary school.

Mr. Shaw told the board that the effect of the health board's ruling will be to halt enlargement of schools in growing areas. Children will have to be taken by bus to less crowded schools, he said.

At the three schools where sewage will be pumped and trucked, the health board has refused to allow the septic tank to be pumped out.

The health board is insisting that a second tank be installed, which would receive effluent from the septic tank.

SIX-FOOT FENCE: A six-foot-high fence must be built around the site of the buried tanks, he said.

Asked why, Mr. Shaw said no reasons had been given. In the case of Saanichton elementary school the health board has required relocation of a sewage pump at added cost to the school district, said consulting engineer Ted Maranda of Vancouver.

Mr. Shaw declared: "The point at issue here is the right of the health board to require certain engineering specifications."

Court May Have Final Word For Joggers, Dogs

A conflict between joggers and dog owners in Esquimalt was discussed Monday night by the municipal council, which decided the joggers will have the last word—in court. Council considered a series of correspondence from Harold Hemus and the SPCA and concluded that joggers pursued through the municipality's streets by dogs would have to support their complaints by testifying in court when the SPCA lays charges against the dog owners.

Mr. Hemus had written to council complaining that he was forced to carry a club to protect himself from dogs at large.

The letter was referred to D. H. Beeching, secretary-manager of the SPCA, for a report. Mr. Beeching wrote to 30 dog owners in the area asking them to keep their dogs controlled.

Evening patrols tried by the SPCA had resulted in labor problems and weren't successful, Mr. Beeching said. He suggested complainants should be willing to go to court when the SPCA laid the necessary charges.

"No one can complain that he has not been fairly and adequately warned; if dog owners continue to turn their dogs loose on the streets they must accept the penalty for their actions," his letter concluded.

Ald. J. W. Bell said that he is a dog owner and didn't like the "tenor" of Mr. Hemus's letter or Mr. Beeching's letter. He said his dog "goes after prowlers" and has done so on many occasions.

He compared a jogger being chased by four or five dogs with the saying that a dog never chases a cat until it runs. Although Mr. Hemus has the right to go jogging, "if it was me, I would find a different route."

Council decided to send a copy of Mr. Beeching's letter to Mr. Hemus and explain that he would have to testify against the dog owners to gain satisfaction.

Saanich-Islands Finale

Candidates Face Noisy Audience

By NANCY BROWN

A shattered water glass bore mute testimony to an unruly election meeting with plenty of audience participation as Saanich-Islands candidates got in their last licks at Sidney Monday night.

More than 200 people crowded into the dining room and stood in the lobbies at the Sidney Hotel to hear the candidates, although their shouts and remarks frequently drowned out the speakers' voices.

At one point chairman John Salvador, gaveling for order, hammered a water glass. He broke the glass and for a minute succeeded in quieting the audience.

MAIN ISSUES

Questions about a Hansard, Commonwealth Trust and the progress of the Pat Bay highway seemed uppermost in the minds of the audience during the short question period which followed the speeches.

Secured incumbent John Tisdale dwelt upon his fear of union domination of the NDP if it formed the government.

He said that during the committee stage of the debate on legislation covering open pit mining, there was an NDP filibuster in the House until a letter was received from the United Steelworkers of America which gave approval to the legislation.

'IN NO TIME'

"As soon as that happened, opposition withered completely and the bill went through three readings in no time at all," he said.

"That proves that international trade unions could affect the cabinet and the NDP," he said.

HIGHWAY TOPIC

Liberal candidate Louis Lindholm attacked Secord action on the Pat Bay highway, which he said was 16 miles of the most highly travelled road in B.C.

He contrasted the highway, which he said had the second highest traffic count in B.C. with 60 miles of paved three-lane highway between Williams Lake and Barkerville, a seasonal tourist town.

He advocated a two highway system, one a ferry freeway and the other to carry local traffic.

He hit at provincial government throw-aways of dollars into the Rose-Blanchard thoroughfare, which he said was intended to link up with the highway, but later was doomed after a $1,000,000 expenditure to trail off into nowhere.

Don Johannessen said that in order to attract secondary industries trained workers should be available.

A technical school should be built to provide the training, and in answer to a heckler added that the vocational school under construction will not provide trained people.

Almost drowned out by hecklers and shouting to make himself heard, Mr. Johannessen asked for free prescription drugs for the elderly, and for free chronic care hospitals.

"Old people are losing their homes and their life savings just because they are sick and have to pay their own hospitalization," he said. "It's not right."

Crash Injuries Cited in Death

Retired businessman Silas Cox, 76, of 880 Jasmine Avenue, died of a fractured spinal cord and a ruptured heart, a coroner's jury was told Monday night.

After medical evidence was heard, Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre adjourned the inquest until 7:30 p.m. Sept. 3 in the Law Courts.

Mr. Cox was fatally injured by a car at Kings and Douglas, Thursday afternoon.

Born in Buxton, England, Mr. Cox had lived in Victoria for 15 years. He was a member of Britannia Branch No. 7, of the Royal Canadian Legion.

He is survived by his wife Eveline; sons Raymond, of Houston, Texas and Jack, of Toronto, Ont.; daughter Mrs. C. (Barbara) Caldwell, of Toronto, Ont.; and four grandchildren.

Funeral services will be at 10:30 a.m. today at Sands Mortuary on Quadra.

Boy Struck, Killed; Injured Man Dies

An eight-year-old boy was killed Sunday when he ran in front of a car on Gorge Road. Another boy who was following him escaped injury.

Daniel Eric Cox, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Cox of 240 Burnside East, was thrown 97 feet from the point of impact with a car driven by Julian Andrew Forrester, of 3887 Brae foot police said.

The boy was trying to cross Gorge Road near Carroll. It is not known whether an inquest will be held.

SECOND DEATH

He was Victoria's 11th traffic fatality this year — and the death in hospital Sunday of Dr. R. M. Torrie, injured Aug. 18, brought the total dead to 12.

Dr. Torrie, of 2783 Sonass Drive, was injured last Monday when his car collided with a front-end loader outside the Oak Bay Municipal Hall. An inquest date has not been set.

Dr. Torrie, 45, had been a resident of Victoria for 18 years and was a past president of the Greater Victoria Dental Association. His funeral will be at 1:15 p.m. Thursday at McCall Bros. Chapel.

THREE SONS

He is survived by his wife Alynne, three sons, Bruce, Douglas and Tommy; a brother, Lt. Cmdr. Bruce Torrie, of Ottawa; and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Torrie of 1270 Beach Drive.

Meanwhile two-year-old Sandra Beban of 701 Esquimalt Road was still in "very serious condition" Monday in St. Joseph's Hospital as a result of head injuries she received in an accident Thursday.

The girl was in a stroller being pushed across Esquimalt Road by her grandmother when she was struck by a car.

'Now, This Is Our Plan ...'

Little Swinger Tries Out Square

Girl with rhythm is Julie Duffield. Visitor from California, Julie couldn't resist beat at Centennial Square Monday night as Victoria region square dancers performed before night's production of Tartuffe in McPherson Playhouse. Saanich Swingers, B.C. champion square dancers at PNE this year, dance behind littlest swinger. Other members of her lopsided square are mom and dad, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Duffield.
